DOMINION BOODLERS.

Some Serious Charges Made by a Toronto Paper.

Toronto, Feb. 6.—[By the Associated Press.] The Globe publishes today serious charges against Adolphe Caron the Postmaster-General, and Tarte, who made the charges that resulted in Sir Hector Langevin's downfall, and will call for a reopening of the inquiry of the last session. It will publish fac similes of documents, including checks, which it claims will prove that Sir Adolphe drew upon the funds in McGreevy's hands for the election of 1887, and that his drafts were for political or purposes.

It alieges that Tarte also received some of the money; also that boodling was carried on in the Quebec district, directly under the personal superintendence of the ministers of the Crown and on regular business principles. A Rich Man Sued for the Care of His Insane Wife.

Acquiring Wealth Under an Alias in California-Wife No. 2 Also Brings an Action Against Him for a Big Sum.

San Francisco, Feb. 6.—[By the Associated Press.] An extraordinary story has been brought to light by a suit filed yesterday in the Federal Court in this city by the St. Vincent Institute for the Insane at St. Louis against John Davis, to recover $5342 and interest for the care of his wife. Mary Ann Davis from care of his wife, Mary Ann Davis, from March 20, 1876, until October 20,

ANTI-LOTTERY.

No Truce to be Made With the Great

NEU YORK, Feb. 6.—By the Associated Press.] A private dispatch received by Charles B. Spahr, one of the editors of the Christian Union, from Col. C. Harrison Parker, editor of the New Orleans New Delta, the organ of the anti-lottery party, says:

We will push the fight to a finish. It is a war to the death. We have no reliance on Morris's promises. The Foster tieket will march on to victory.

Mr. Spahr, who has been following the campaign in Louisiana, speaking with reference to the Morris letter and present condition of affairs, says: "Unless a Governor and Legislature hostile to the lottery are elected the business of the lottery company cannot possibly be brought to an end before January 1, 1895, and would then probably be allowed to continue without authorization in the Constitution. With the state machinery in its hands, the lottery might easily call a constitutional convention and secure a recharter without submitting the proposition to the people. Many of the anti-lottery people believe that Morris himself, who is a millionaire, with influential social connections in New York and Boston, would gladly give up the fight and re-tire from the lottery business with the $15,000,000 or $20,000,000 he is $15,000,000 or $20,000,000 he is reported to have accumulated, but it would not be easy for him to dispose of his interest to other men. In spite of the postal law $15,000,000 or $20,000,000 a year comes to the lottery company from other States. Those who have been fighting the battle against the lottery therefore appeal to their friends in other States to help them in the struggle. The anti-lottery

He believes that the convention meant what it said, at all events, he did, and he declines to cooperate with the Campaign Committee. He appeals to the party and hopes it will take such action as will be accept-able to all Republicans.

By Telegraph to The Times.

Washington, Feb. 6 .- [By the Asso ciated Press.] The Garza movement along the Mexican border is giving officials of the War Department considerable trouble just at present. No secret is made of their disappointment that Garza is still at large in American territory, and that his operations cannot be confined exclusively to Mexican territory. Garza and his followers are known to have received aid and sympathy from Mexican residents in the vicinity of the Rio Grande, and the fact that United States troops are unable to capture the revolutionists is in a large measure attributed to the deceptions practiced on them by these people

Gen. Grant, Acting Secretary of War, and Gen. Schofield, had a conference with the President on this subject today, and it is understood it was decided to take vigorous action to the second s to take vigorous action to capture Garza and his immediate followers, or drive

Señor Romero, the Mexican Minister, also had a talk with Secretary Blaine on the same subject today, and was assured that the Department would do its utmost to preserve the neutrality laws. IMPORTANT NAVAL CHANGES.

It was stated at the Navy Department this morning that these orders had no bearing upon the Chilean episode, as the relief of Capt. Schley and Remey was a matter of rule, those officers having already served more than the regula-tion time as commanders of vessels. Their times expired some weeks ago and it was at their urgent request that no changes were made as long as there was a prospect of trouble. Their relief from their vessels during such a period would have been regarded as rather evere unless there was some specific reason for the change. Capt. Managers of the Exposition Court the Fullest Investigation. WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—[By the Associated Press.] The Congressional managers of the World's Fair project are at present resting on their speak, and are awaiting developments at Chicago before proceeding with the work here, except in a quiet way. There are a number of petitions and memorials pertaining to the fair before the Columbian Exposition Committee, but it is unlikely they will be considered in advance of action on the bill to give Government aid to the fair, which is the principal business that will come before the committee during this sessions.

The resolution offered by Mr. Dickerson of Kentucky, calling for an investison of Rentucky, Calling for an investi-gation by the Judiciary Committee into the constitutionality of the World's Fair project and Government aid to it in the shape of appropriations, is viewed with complacency by the friends of the Exposition. They say they are entirely satisfied to have the Judiciary of the Exposition. They say they are entirely satisfied to have the Judiciary Committee look thoroughly into the constitutional question, confident that the conclusion reached will not be ad-verse, but, on the contrary, will be fa-vorable to the Exposition. The World's Fair bill, they say, was drafted by three of the best lawyers in the West, and will stand legal scrutiny.

THE OPTIONS HEARING. More Views on the Effects of Gambling

in Grain.
Washington, Feb. 6.—[By the Associated Press.] A. J. Sawyer of Minneapolis was before the House Committee on Agriculture again today. He de-fended the custom of buying options on exchange, to cover the possibility of loss on wheat in elevators. He said speculators carried the surplus for the actual wheat buyers and enabled them to sell their wheat as fast as it could be absorbed. If the wheat in store was shoved forward the market would be glutted and cash wheat would fall to very low prices. By buying futures against the wheat he had in elevators the elevator owner insured himself against loss.

H. H. Aldrich, of the Chicago Board H. H. Aldrich, of the Chicago Board of Trade, was asked if spot wheat, which was the wheat the farmeas sold, would not be higher if futures were done away with. He said if too much wheat were not sold prices now might be better, but in May it would be lower and the speculator, owing to the lower rates of interest he paid, could carry wheat cheaper than the farmer.

THE NICARAGUA CANAL.

Some False Reports About the Enterprise Denied.

Over Five Million Dollars Expended on the Work So Far and Operations are Continuing with Good Prospects of Success.

By Telegraph to The Times.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 6.- By the Associated Press.] Capt. William L. Merry, ex-president of the San Franber of Commerce. today regarding the statements made by R. T. Sparks, who has returned here from Managua, to the effect that work on the Nicaragua Canal had ceased. Capt. Merry is local agent for the Nicaraguan government and is also inter-ested in the development of the canal. He said: "The statement that work on the canal has ceased is erroneous. The the canal has ceased is erroneous. The construction company does not profess to be doing extensive work on the canal pending the negotiations of their securities in Europe or until their contract has been passed upon by Congress, but my advices from the district engineer in December last showed that there were over 400 men on the pay-roll at the time and that work was progressing steadily, if slowly. The company has a concession from Nicaragua for 100 years. Under the terms of it they were required to the terms of it they were required to expend $2,000,000 in work the first year. According to the report of the board appointed by that government, nearly $3,000,000 were expended by company, and the government not only approved the work of the construction as complying with the requirements of the concession, but granted tension of ten years in addition to that originally fixed for the completion of the work and opening of the canal. Over $5,000,000 of the $2,000,000 of the capital stock of the company has been expended in the work, which has been economically managed and been productive of good results.

"A. G. Menocal, a representative of London effecting the disposal of $100,-000,000 in bonds and $90,000,000 in stock of the canal company and pending disposal of these securities and the action of Congress, which must neces-sarily modify the company's projects, the latter is not warranted in making any extensive improvements. My idea any extensive improvements. My idea is that these statements, detrimental to the company, come from persons interested in the numerous railroads projected or constructed in the territory adjacent to the canal. Such roads, far from being a hindrance to the canal, would develop the country and commerce, and would act as feeders to the canal and vice verse. It is conto the canal and vice versa. fidently anticipated that the local trade of Nicaragua alone will, within a few years after the construction of the canal, pay for its maintenance, and I can say that failing of favorable action by the United States Congress, England stands ready to take up the work."

AMUSEMENTS TONIGHT. AT THE THEATER-Monte Cristo.

This sort of weather brings out the soft and weak places in our highways.

JUPITER PLUVIUS is evidently punishing us for doubting his ability to give us a good drenching this season.

THE foreign commerce of New York city for 1891 amounted to more than a billion of dollars-figures that make one's head swim.

Southern California orange-growers will have to do their best at the World's Fair. Florida will make an orange exhibit of 23,700 square feet.

THE Sacramento grand jury is still searching for evidence. It acts much like the tramp who looks for work and prays that he may not find it.

FLORIDA and Bermuda are competing in the supply of new potatoes to At-lantic coast cities. Southern California could do more in this line were it not for high railroad rates.

According to the Buenos Ayres papers the land in the Argentine Republic recently purchased by Baron Hirsch makes him the largest land-owner in the world. The property amounts in all to 17,287,760 acres, the cost being about 8 cents an acre.

New York passed a law against suicide, but, as might have been expected, it has had no deterrent effect, the suicides being more numerous than 'ever. If a man or woman wish to kill themselves they will do so, with or without the consent of the Legislature

It is estimated that the penal institutes of this country contain 100,000 inmates, at a total expense of about $15,000,000. What a long way that sum would go toward ameliorating the surroundings of the poor of our great cities and so lessening the temptation to crime.

THE talk about a great combination of California orchards is illogical. There are too many of them; they are too scattered, and it would be impossible to keep them together. Perhaps a special fruit, like oranges, which can only be grown over a limited area, might be made the subject of a combination, but even that would be difficult. There are too many small growers.

Col. A. L. Conger, the Ohio member of the National Republican Executive Committee, who is now in California, thinks it possible that there may be a contest between Blaine and Harrison for the nomination; that the President cannot possibly secure a renomination. and thate McKinley is likely to be third in the race before the convention, with a possibility of being first in the event of a tussle between Blaine and Harri-Then let the tussle materialize, say we!

THE Louisiana lottery has broken its faith with the people of Louisiana several times already, and it is quite prob able that the big bunco scheme in now offering to volun tarily surrender its charter at expiration is only playing 'possum. If it can thus prevent a split in the Democratic party and secure the election of complaisant State officials it will be willing to take its chances of holding on by the use of boodle. The proposed amendment to the State charter may be approached later. We do not believe that the Louisiana lottery intends to quit until it is forced to do so.

ALARMISTS in Europe are now trying to give American canned fruits a bad reputation by claiming to find evidence of poison in cans submitted to their in spection. This may serve to hamper American trade in these lines for a time or may even lead to exclusive laws, but, in the end, the unjust discrimina, tion will go the way of that against Americar pork-it will be withdrawn American canned fruits are in themselves innocent of poison. It is possible that in tin cans there may be a trace of rosin or acid used to make the solder stick. If the tin can cannot be made without the use of deleterious sub stances, why then the fruits may be put up in glass or crockeryware. will be some way to circumvent Euro pean objections.

W. G. RAOUL of New York, who is president of the Mexican National Railroad, in speaking of the Garcia trouble savs:

Twenty-five years ago a single adventurer could have entered the country and have had an army at his back before reaching the capital. That army, too, could have been on the march perhaps an entire month before the government learned of its existence. Today the would-be revolutionist, in place of sweeping up an army of unsettled idlers, encounters an industrious, contented people, who are united in their instinctive opposition to any idea of a revolution, because they know that it would mean nothing but a return from their present prosperity to their former nomadic life. Today Mexico has railfoads which reach every point of any importance in the republic, and telegraph lines extend all through every one of the states. The government has an absolutely perfect system by which it is kept in touch with every move and every sentiment throughout the entire country. Even were there any number of people to be found willing to join a revolutionary movement the government, with its facilities and its control of the railroads, would have it crushed almost before it was born."

The Nicaragua Canal.

Afthe testimony of a man named R. T. Sparks is to be believed the reports which have been published regarding the satisfactory progress of work on the Nicaragua Canal are ill-founded. Mr. Sparks has just returned to San Franisco from a six months' residence in Nicaragua. He declares that all that has been done is a few miles of clearing and a little work on the harbor at Greytown. The chief engineer, Mr. Sparks said, had received orders to discharge all the men employed, except two or three, owing to lack of funds. Mr. Sparks continued:

"The people in this country have no faith in the canal scheme. There are several million feet of lumber lying rotten and use-less at Greytown. It was supplied by War-ner Miller, as were the four dredgers, three of which were useless, and it has been ner Miller, as were the four dredgers, three of which were useless, and it has been stated that the one which was sunken when they were being brought from Panama, was purposely allowed to do so to hide its defects. The dredgers are also rotting and rusting away, only one of them having done any work, dredging itself a little way up the river.

done any work, dredging itself a little way up the river.

"Many people were ruined by buying large tracts of land along the proposed line of the canal. They have been very disappointed and annoyed at the delay. One prominent man stated that if they got a railroad there would be anend to the canal scheme, and his remark met with the retort that if so it was ended now as it was a dead sure thing they would have the railroad before long."

It is sincerely to be hoped that these

It is sincerely to be hoped that these statements are not true, or, at least, are exaggerated. There are undoubtedly vested interests at work in a quiet way against the canal enterprise, which makes it more regrettable that the people of this Coast take so little interest in an enterprise which would work a commercial revolution from Alaska to San Diego, and would do more to develop California than any other single event which it is possible to imagine,

The Legally Insane.

The plea of insanity as an excuse for murder is not made so frequently in our criminal courts nowadays as it was a few years ago, when it was more fashionable, but it is still made on occasion, and it is measurably successful We are informed by the telegraph that the young person of Memphis, Tenn., who waylaid another young person in the street and cut the latter's throat with a razor, will plead insanity. It is very probable that the plea may be sustained sufficiently to acquit the accused of the charge of murder. But it is a safe bet that the individual thus ac quitted will not be cited before a commission of lunacy immediately there after, and, if thus arraigned, would not be committed to an insane asylum. Who ever heard of the insane person of a murder trial finding his way to the mad

This brings up the fact that, as the laws are administered, there is a degree of insanity which makes a man wholly irresponsible for his acts, and yet th community is accorded no protection from him. A mad dog or a mad bull which is not morally responsible and endangers human life is shot down without ceremony. A mad human being who not only endangers human life, but takes life, and is held morally unaccountable, is turned loose to endanger and take life again. Assuming that the anding of insanity is honest, the fair treatment to the public who establish and maintain courts to furnish protection to life and property under the law, against insane people as well as criminals.

The fact is that, in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred, the finding is not honest; the person accredited with insan ity was not insane at all when the act was committed, but merely gave way to a fit of anger or devilishness. The lawyer, who receives a very large fee for doing so, makes this out "temporary insanity" and assures the public in his blandest way that there is no danger of a recurrence of the attack.

But we have no right to assume in our aws that they are to be dishonestly administered. We are not justified in winking at a subterfuge. To be en tirely consistent, the murderer acquitted on the ground of insanity, tem porary or permanent, should immedi ately undergo an examination, be pronounced insane by a commission of phy sicians and committed to an asylum Probably the authorities do not dare to turn the laugh upon themselves by un dertaking this formula, for it would be very certain to fail. That which makes out a good case for a lawyer does not make out a correspondingly bad case under the examina tion of several conscientious physicians If the insane murderer should not prove to be an insane patient the tw opposite determinations, coming so close together, would be apt to show the whole procedure in a farcical light. Hence the subsequent examination for insanity is generally omitted. Now, it seems to us that society has right to call a halt in such tomfoolery. If absolute honesty cannot be secured in the consideration of a plea- of insan ity then society may be justified in putting an bonest construction upon it at any rate, and insisting that the dangerously insane person shall be put out of the way of further mischief.

To this end there ought to be an institution midway in character between a State's prison and an insand asylum. When a person is acquitted of a murder or assault to murder on the grounds of insanity let it be provided that he must be committed forthwith to this house of detention for a term of years. Let him be treated during his fame confinement therein, not as a criminal, but as an insane person, and given the care and medical attention which his case may require, but let him be restrained under lock and bar. There should be no discharges from this institution until the full time shall have expired, unless upon a favorable report of a board of physicians and a pardon from the Governor.

If laws were made to provide for the incarceration of insane murderers in this way, and rigidly enforced, depend upon it not so many pleas of in-sanity would be entered in the courts, and those which are entered would come nearer hitting the truth. Society would then be sure of protection from the legally insane at least for some years, and perhaps permanently, for they would have a chance to be thoroughly cured before being permitted to go at large.

The merits of both play and Monte Christo. The merits of both play and actor are sufficiently well known to make further comment here superfluous. The sale of seats is very large and the brief season will doubtless prove one of profit to the playhouse, and it is quite sure to be pleasant to its patrons. to its patrons.

By Telegraph to The Times.

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—[By the Associated Press.] The Herald's Buenos Ayres special says: "Throughout Argentine Republic the utmost disquiet prevails over tomorrow's provincial elections, and the general alarm seems only too well founded, for the country is rent with political feuds. The various political parties are armed with re-volvers and cudgels. Intense anxiety is felt everywhere in this city tonight.

A PORTUGUESE SCANDAL. Efforts to Impeach an ex-Minister of LISBON, Feb. 6.-[By Cable and Associated Press.] After the cabinet council today a decree was issued dismissing Osito Carvalho, Administrator-Genera of Customs, from office. It is one of the most important offices of the country, and the decree created a sensation Carvalho had great influence, both with the late and the present King. He was also on terms of intimacy with Senhor Carvalho, formerly Minister of Finance. In the cortes Arriega demanded the im-peachment of ex-Minister Carvalho and the appointment of a committee to de cide whether also other members should cide whether also other members should be impeached in connection with the railway scandal. The proposition of Arriega was received with dead silence and discussion of it reserved.

The motion grew out of Senhor Carvalho's action while holding the portfolio of Minister of Finance in advancing to the Royal Railway Company f18.-000,000 on his own responsibility, and without the knowledge of his colwithout the knowledge of his col-leagues. About the middle of last month Carvalho informed the Council of Ministers of what he had done and the President of the council laid the matter before the cortes. The Council of Ministers, the President said, declined to accept any responsibility in the matter and Senhor Carvalho the matter and Senhor Carv resigned. The President further clared that his efforts to find a man who would accept the office of finance minister had failed and that in consequence the whole ministry had rened. Carvalho afterward explained both chambers the nature of his proceedings during his term of office. stated that he arranged for payments amounting to 17,000 contos of reis during this period, and when he ac-cepted the office the only resources available were 600 contos, remaining from the tobacco loan.

Senhor Carvalho was visibly affected in making his statement. He said that had his efforts to save the country from financial distress been realized he would have been a hero.

The action of the cabinet in dismissing from his position Senhor Carvalho, Administrator-General of Customs, was due to that official concealing from the government the fact that transit dues owed to the state by the Royal Railway Company had not been paid.

Burlin, Feb. 6.—[Copyright, 1892, by the New York Associated Press.] Whatever may be the intention of the ministry regarding modifying the Prussian elementary education act, the proceedings in committee show that the Clerico-Conservative majority is not disposed to assume a conciliatory atti-tude. The clauses containing the most arbitrary provisions have already passed—16 to 12. By an unaltered passed—16 to 12. By an unaltered majority the House rushed the successive paragraphs of the act, heedless of protests of the Liberals. The committee has asked Herr Miquel for a detailed statement of the annual expenditures under the measure. The Conservatives got a thorough setback when they found that the new education law would involve an increased outlay of 9,000,000 marks annually, which, it is proposed, shall be raised on the incometax. The opposition hold that those estimates are not sufficiently large. The Conservatives have almost decided to drop the measure unless the financial clauses of the bill are molded to suit them.

In the meantime popular agitation is spreading throughout the empire. The Liberals in every state, recognizing the fact that a victory of the Clericals in Prussia will enable them to triumph in Prussia will enable them to triumph elsewhere, are organizing demonstrations against the proposed law. The Court Theater at Stuttgart was recently the scene of a popular manifestation. During the performance of Schiller's Don Carlos, when the actor playing "Marquis de Posa" said, "Sire, give us liberty to think," the audience rose and burst into prolonged cheers. cheers.

On the other side, at a conference of Catholic bishops held at Fulda, a resolu-tion was adopted accepting the pro-posals and tendering the congratulations of the conference to the government.

He declared that the soldiers would be better treated if the non-commissioned officers were of better social material. In the subsebetter social material. A COUNT DISGRACED. The trial of Count Limburg Stirum, pensioned member of the diplomatic corps, for publishing a series of violent articles against the commercial treaties, resulted in the court sentencing him to dismissal from the public service; de-creeing that he should forfeit his pen-sion and be deprived of the diplomatic rank of minister. The sentence of the count is publicly regarded as being due to the influence of the Emperor's desire to give a lesson to Prince Bismarck. The Socialist agitator, Bruns, in a lecture delivered a short time ago on the Chartist movement in England in 1848, described the measures taken by Stephens to arm his followers and quoted the saying of Stephens: "There is a weapon against which rifles and bayonets are powerless—blacing cotton dipped in tar." For this suggestion of incendiarism Bruns was sentenced to a month's imprisonment at hard labor.

By Telegraph to The Times.

PRESCOTT (Ariz.,) Feb. 6.—[By the Associated Press.] Further information received today from Verde Valley in regard to the alleged abduction of Alice Packard, a sixteen-year-old girl, by two Indians, confirms the report received yesterday. At the ranch house at which the Indians stopped with their captive there was no one at home ex-cept a half-witted boy, and he did not tell the story until three days after the occurrence. While his story was not believed at first the neighbors have since investigated and discovered moccasin tracks, together with tracks made by a girl's shoes.

It is now thought that the Indians were Navajoes and Apaches, and, as were Navajoes and Apaches, and, as they had three days' start of their pursuers, there is little hope of overtaking the girl alive. The Indians are probably back on the reservation and it is feared the girl is dead. Forty armed men are scouring the country in every direction. At the time of her abduction the girl was on her way to her uncle, and her parents, supposing her to have arrived there, did not know of her terrible fate until several days afterward.

The Water Question .- "There is no doubt but what there is an overwhelming sentiment in favor of the city owning its own water works," said President Bonsall, of the Council, last evendent Bonsail, of the Council, last evening, "and if put to a vote there is no question as to the result. The only thing to be settled is the best means by which the works can be acquired and the system put in operation. The special committee of the Council will probably hold another meeting during the coming week, when details will be considered and an effort made to get the business in such shape that a report can be presented to the Council at the meeting Monday week. Some people consider the present agitation premature, but this is a mistake. The contract between the city and the water company expires in about seven years, and there is really no time to lose. It will not do to put off a matter of such grave importance to every resident of the city until the last moment and then have to grapple with the problem at such a great disadvantage."

The Santa Monica Boulevard.—"The new boulevard to Santa Monica from ing, "and if put to a vote there is no

With this, the Santa Monica road, the San Fernando road and another road to the southeast,

The Orange Crop.—"Of course we are all disappointed in the orange crop," said Assistant General Freight Agent Whitmore of the Southern California lines, "and the railroads have common agree with the growers and shippers. lines, "and the railroads have common cause with the growers and shippers. They have all lost money, but they should remember that failures are likely to occur in any crop and in any country. The failures in the wheat crop of the Northwest and the fruit crops of the East occur frequently, and if some such misfortune comes to Southern California at very long intervals we should not complain. It is true that the rain has greatly hampered the shipment of oranges and has beaten many to the ground, but there will be plenty to move in a little while. March was our best month for shipments last year and will month for shipments last year and will be again this. Yes, the rate will be re-stored on the 15th."

Cloudbursts and Railroads.—"We do not anticipate much trouble from water this season," said Supt. J. A. Muir, of the Southern Pacific; "we are in bet-ter shape than ever before for fighting Of course cloudbursts in the desert cannot be foreseen, but by exer-cising great care we can avoid getting into trouble on their account. We think it better, when there are appreliensions of washouts, to tie up the trains on the road over night so as to run through the suspected region by daylight. Our bridges over the river here are in good shape, and the line to the north, as well as the Yuma line, is out of the reach of flood water."

Headed for California .- "I have just returned from a visit to several of the Eastern States," said Dr. N. H. Morri-son, "and from what I have seen I am confident that Southern California is confident that Southern California is about to have an immense immigration. Times are better in the East than they have been for years and hundreds of people who have not been able to sell out before are now disposing of their property for the purpose of coming to California, and all are headed for this part of the State."

It Can't be Laughed Down .- "There is no use of Lindley trying to laugh down this Whittier Reform School business," was the significant remark of a wellknown Union Leaguer. a day or two ago. "It is one of those things that can't be disposed of in that way; too much has been brought out in connection with the mauner in which the whitewashing was secured to let it rest and nothing short of an official investi-gation will satisfy the people. The entire Republican party does not approve of this Whittier business, by a great deal, and the sooner some of these frisky youngsters find this fact out the better it will be for them as well as for the party which they are trying to represent."

A Dangerous Corner.—"This is going to be a lively corner after awhile—almost too lively, I am afraid," said a merchant yesterday, referring to the intersection of Spring and First streets. "When the electric cars begin running along here people will have to be more along acre people will have to be more careful than ever in crossing the street. Now, you know, the two lines of cable cars pass, here, and two lines of horse-cars beside, so that when the electric cars also run the electric cars also run he Spring street tracks there be that many more cars to dodge. It keeps one policeman busy now to protect people, and he will have more than his hands full when the danger is still further increased."

RAIN GAUGES.

Los Angeles, Feb. 4.—[To the Editor of The Times.] When rain falls upon the earth, as other hardsurface which is warm, evaporation commences. The amount of vapor produced by this evaporation will depend chiefly upon the warmth of the body upon which the rain falls and the greater or less humidity of the atmosphere resting upon that body. This vapor will rise until it reaches a point where the air is colder than the vapor, and then condensation will ensue and this vapor will again fall in form of rain.

ensue and this vapor will again fail in form of rain.

Rain is frequently produced by the condensation of vapor at a slight elevation from the surface of the earth. This clevation can be pretty well assertance from the size of the drops of rain when they strike the ground, as their size depends upon the distance which they have fallen.

If the condensation takes place near the surface of the earth, and when there is little or no movement of the atmosphere, the surface of the earth upon which the rain falls is warm and the air resting upon the earth is dry, the evaporation may be almost equal to the rainfall. If, under these circumstances, a rain-gauge should be placed upon the surface of the ground, it would catch a much greater quantity of water than that which actually fell from the clouds.

If the foregoing position is correct, it follows that a rain-gauge, placed upon the surface of the earth or near it, does not measure, with any degree of certainty or accuracy, the quantity of water which penetrates the soil and becomes beneficial to vegetation during a rainstorm, and that a rain-gauge, placed at a higher elevation, if below the rain-cloud, will therefore more correctly measure the quantity of water which has fallen upon and been absorbed by the earth.

attracted by the very excellent programme provided.

Atter the usual opening exercises Miss Harriet A. Landdington of Riverside read a bright, crisp paper on "Myths and Tales for the Primary Grades." Myths and Tales for the Association of the Primary Grades. Myths and tales have a strong connection with geography and science if we can only read between the lines of the story, said the speaker; all natural phenomena were personified by the savage races and as the child's mind in ust pass through the various stages that mark development of nations it is early in a condition, not only to love, but to learn much from those beautiful images.

In the myth is to be found the early history of the human race and the early reading of those stories paves the way for the understanding of the many allusions to these that occur in the liberature of all ages and people.

The resauce of the myth to science enables the pupil to be made acquainted with the poetry of nature and this furnishes an antidote to the hardness that may be engendered by the study of science alone.

The relation between familiar nursery rhymes and myths was very prettily shown by the reading of several myths from the Eskimo and Icelandic literature. By the reading and talking of these pleasant little tales the language, imagination and memory of pupils are stimulated and developed. C. E. Jones of Alhambra next read a very excellent paper on "English in the Grammar Grades," handling his subject in a very clever manner.

Mrs. Coleman, of the Pasadena high school, next presented a paper on "Engitish in the High School," leading up in an ideal manner from the foundations already laid in the lower grades.

The correct method of studying an author is by the use of writings of the author aimself, not reading a book of criticism and scraps. One of the important results of the reading of the works of the best aughors is that culture and ease of manner of expression that comes from constant contact with the thoughts of cultured people, just as ease of manner is acquired by constant association with people of culture.

Prof. Colcordof Pomona College next delivered an address on "English Speech from College Training."

Two college courses are devoted mainly to the development of good language. The courses in science and mathematics do not emphasize the proper use of speech, so we may meet men of good college training.

to the development of good language. The courses in science and mathematics do not emphasize the proper use of speech, so we may meet men of good college training whose language is barbarous, but on the other hand there are college men, such as Beecher, Philips, and many others whose language is silver-tongued in its purity and moothness of diction. College training, hen, does train to good English speech.

Mrs. Harriet Wadleigh, of the University of Southern California, then completed and summarized the subject of English by a paper on the subject of English by a paper on the subject of English to the complete and Ethical Culture." In the building up of character the instructor must not forget the structure of humanity. The best progress yet made in the case of the city aga not Smith was made yester-day. The other five jurymen were secured before 3 o'clock, and court adjourned until Monday meralag at 10 o'clock, when the examina on of witnesses will begin. Two venires of fifty men each have been ex-cused on the grounds that the officer who summoned them was biased, and of the other three venires examined the great bulk of men have been excused on the grounds that they were either firemen or not on the last assessment roll of city off cers. Sixteen were excused from the first two venires because they were blased and four for the same reason from the third venire. Of this last venire and four for the same reason from the third venire. Of this last venire only eight men were called up and four selected. Everybody seemed satisfied that the present jury are a set of fair-minded men, and they are about equally divided as to number for an a gainst high license. Considering the fact that both sides were determined on having fair men the present jurymen should consider themselves complimented. There is a subpoona out for a number of men who have visited the "bluefront" who will act as witnesses in the case. Of course these men will not be prosecuted, as some seem to think, from the fact that they will be considered as turning State's evidence. This is one way of offering inducements to tell the truth. The names of the jurymen are as follows, and they were selected in the order named: E. Mackeys, C. H. Marsball, Rufus W. Wiley, B. F. Whipp, S. H. Ford, W. R. Goodwin, George Carter, D. Hawkins, George W. Hill, John Gutterson, S. M. Mesereau and Morris Keller.

SAN BERNARDING.

[Branch office at Stewart Hotel newsstand where news, advertisements and orders for THE TIMES are received.] Throughout the weary hours of the night the jury in the Ward case sat and shivered and listened to the rain and disagreed. For seventeen hours they stood divided, nine for acquittal and three for conviction. Mrs. Eliza Ward was thus held, in the eyes of one fourth of the jury, guilty of manslaughter. But at 7 o'clock yesterday morning the jury agreed that there was no use in foisting upon the county the expense of another trial in which the chances were 9 to 1 that a like state of affairs would result, so they sent word that they had reached a conclusion, and pro-nounced the defendant "not guilty." In a case of this kind, invoving as it does, re-ligious and medical projudices, it would be almost impossible to secure a jury that would agree either way.

Meeting to Discuss the Bean Situation the Coming Season.

The Advisability of Securing Lower Rail road Rates-Committee Appointed to Formulate Plans and Draft Resolutions-General News Notes.

A large gathering of business men and bean-growers met at the Town Hall Satur-day afternoon to discuss the question of lower rates and the advisability or raising lima beans the coming season. Col. Heath of Carpinteria, Marion Cannon, F. A. Fos-ter, Thomas Lake, J. L. Truslow of the Santa Fé. E. S. Hail and J. H. Sharp of this county, addressed the meeting. It was the county, addressed the meeting. It was the sense of those present that fewer limas should be planted, and that if the raitroad company did not reduce the rate that mostly corn and barley would be raised the coming season, and that instead of 1500 carloads of beans for overland shipments there would be less than 500, as most of the freight would go by water to San Francisco. After considerable discussion a committee consisting of Col. Heath and Mr. Sawyer of Carpinteria, J. H. Sharp, J. S. Collins, F. A. "My darling Dollie, I have brought This orange sweet for you, I'm sure you'll like it much, my dear. Now eat it, Dollie, do."

But Dollie sat and never stirred, But looked right straight ahead, And really I do not believe She heard what pussy said.

CHAPTER XI. A GEORGIA FOX BUNT.

For a few days Joe Maxwell forgot all about Mr. Deometarl, Mr. Blandford and Mr. Pruitt. There was distinguished company visiting the editor tinguished company visiting the editor of The Countryman—a young lady from Virginia, Miss Nellie Carter, and her mother, and some officers—at bome on furlough. One of these young officers, a kinsman of the editor, brought his pack of fox-hounds, and arrangements were made for a grand fox hunt. The plantation seemed to arouse itself to please the visitors. The negroes around the house put on their Sunday clothes, and went hurrying about their duties as if to show themselves at their best.

The editor gave the dog to Joe, who took great pains in training him. Before Jomah was 6 months old he had learned to trail was 6 months old he had learned to trail a fox-skin, and by the time he was a year old hardly a morning passed that Joe did not drag the skin for the pleasure of seeing Jonah trail it. He developed great speed and powers of scent, and he was not more than 2 years old before he had run down and caught a red fox, unaided and alone. Naturally Joe was very proud of Jonah, and he was glad of an opportunity to show off the dog's hunting qualities.

In training Jonah Joe had also unwittingly trained an old fox that made his home on the plantation. This fox came to be well-known to every hunter in the country. He was old, and tough, and sly. He had been pursued so often that if he heard a dog bark in the early morning hours, or a horn blow, he was up and away. The negroes called him "old Sandy," and this was the name he came to be known by. Jonah, when a "old Sandy," and this was the name he came to be known by. puppy, had trailed old Sandy many a time, and Joe knew all of his tricks and turnings. He decided that it would be well to give the young officer's pack some exercise with this cunning old fox. All the arrangements for the hunt were made by the editor. Joe Maxwell was to escort Miss Nellie Carter, who, although a Virginian and a good horsewoman, had never ridden across the country after a fox. The lad was to manage so that Miss Carter should see at least as much of the hunt as the young men who were to follow the hounds, while Harbert was to go along to pull down and put up the fences. To Joe this was a new and comical feature of fox-hunting, but the editor said that this would be safer for Miss Carter. When the morning of the hunt ar-

He wanted to see to everything, much to Harbert's amusement. Like all boys, he was excited and enthusiastic, and he was very anxious to see the hunt go off successfully. Finally, when all had had a cup of coffee, they mounted their horses and were ready to go.

By the time the hunters reached the field, which was a mile in extent, and made up of pasture land overgrown with broom sedge, wild plum trees and black-berry vines, the dawn had disappeared before the sun. Red and yellow clouds mingled together in the east and a rosy glow fell across the hills and woods. As they halted for Herbert to take down the fence Joe stole a glance at his companion, and as she sat with her lips parted and the faint reflection of the

"That is your dog, I know," said Miss. Carter. "Why, he is a perfect beauty! Poor fellow!" she exclaimed, stretching her arm out and filliping her fingers. Jonah gathered himself together, leaped lightly into the air, and touched her fair hand with his velvet tongue. Joe blushed with delight, "Why, he jumped as bigh as a man's head!" she caied. A LIFE OF FEAR.

CREATURES THAT KNOW HOW THE CZAR FEELS.

WHEN THE FOX LOOKS ASHAMED-WINTER TRAGEDIES-THE DOG THAT BRAGGED AND THE SQUIRBEL THAT WENT ZIG-ZAG.

cibly reminded of the state of constant fear and apprehension in which the wild creatures live, and I tried to picture to myself what life would be to me, or to any of us, hedged about by so many dan

the bank I was forgers, real or imaginary.

The squirrel would shoot up the tree, making only a brown streak from the bottom to the top; would seize his nut and rush down again in the most precipitate manner. Half way to his which was not over three rods distant, he would rush up the trunk of another tree for a few yards to make an observation. No danger being near, he would dive into his den and reappear again in a twinkling.

Returning for another nut, he would mount the second tree again for another observation. Satisfied that the coast was clear, he would spin along the top of the ground to the tree that bore the nuts, shoot up it as before, seize the fruit, and then back again to his reously with a wild bleat when first discovered. After this first ebullition of fear it usually settles down into the tame humdrum of its bovine elders.

Eternal vigilance is the price of life with most of the wild creatures. There is only one among them whose wildness I cannot understand, and that is the common water turtle. Why is this creature so fearful? What are its enecreature so fearful? What are its ene-mies? I know of nothing that preys upon it. Yet see how watchful and sus-picious these turtles are as they sun themselves upon a log or a rock. Be-fore you are fairly in gunshot of them they slide down into the water and are

He will indeed pause in his walk when you are very near him, but he will not retreat into his shell till you poke him with your foot or your cane. He appears to have no enemies; but the little spotted water turtle is as shy as if he was the delicate tid-bit that every creature was searching for. I did once find one which a fox had dug out of the mud in winter and carried a few rods.

mud in winter and carried a few rods and dropped on the snow as if he had found he had no use for it.

One can understand the fearlessness of the skunk. Nenrly every creature but the farm dog yields to him the right-of-way. All dread his terrible weapon. If you meet one in your walk in the twilight fields the chances are that you will turn out for him, not be

'The cat!" "the bawk!" "the owl!' the boy with the gun!"

It was a bleak December morning;

the first fine flakes of a cold, driving snowstorm were just beginning to sitt down, and the squirrel was eager to finish harvesting his nuts in time. It was quite touching to see how hurried and anxious and nervous he was. I felt and anxious and nervous he was. I felt like going out and lending a hand. The nuts were small, poor pig-nuts, and I thought of all the gnawing he would have to do to get at the scanty meat they held. My little boy took pity on a squirrel that lived in the wall near the gate and cracked the nuts for him and put them upon a small board shelf in the tree where he could sit and eat in the tree where he could sit and eat

The red squirrel is not as provident as the chipmunk. He scorns to lay up stores irregularly, by fits and starts; he never has enough put up to carry him over the winter; hence he is more or less active all through the season. Long before the December snow the chipmunk has for days been making hourly trips to his den with full pockets of nuts or corn or buckwheat his bin holds enough to carry through to April. He need not, an believe does not, set foot out of doors during the whole winter. But the red squirrel trusts more to luck. As alert and watchful as the red squirrel is he is frequently caught by the cat. My Nig—as black as ebony—knows well the taste of his flesh. I have known him to be caught by the black snake and successfully swallowed. The snake no doubt lay in ambush for him. This fear, this ever-present source of danger of the wild creatures, we know little about. Probably the only person in the civilized countries who is no better off than the animals in this respect even dare gather nuts as openly as squirrel. A blacker and more terrible odds with perfect composure. I have seen a coon upon the ground, beset by four men and two dogs, and never for a moment lose his presence of mind, or show a sign of fear. We were trying to capture him alive, and after much maneuvering succeeded. I seized him by the tail while he was occupied with the dogs in his front, and carried him to a barrel which had been got ready. The raccoon is clear grit. The raccoon is clear grit.

The fox is a very wild and suspicions creature, but curiously enough, when you suddenly come face to face with him, when he is held by a trap, or driven by the hound, his expression is not that of fear, but of shame and guilt, He seems to diminish in size and to be overwhelmed with humiliation. Does he know himself to be on old thief, and is that the reason of his embarrasament? is that the reason of his embarrassment?

The coon is probably the most courageous creature among our familiar wild animals. Who ever saw a coon show the white feather? He will face any

The fox has no enemies but man, and when he is fairly outwitted he looks the shame he evidently feels. In the heart of the rabbit fear con-stantly abides. How her eyes protrude! She can see back and front and on all sides equal to a bird. The fox is after her, the owls are after her, the gunners are after her, and she has no defense but her speed. She always keep well to cover. The Northern hare keeps in the thickest brush. If the hare or rabbit thickest brush. If the hare or rabbit crosses a broad open exposure it does so hurriedly, like a mouse when it crosses the road. The mouse is liable to be pounced upon by a hawk, and the hare or rabbit by the snowy owl, or else the great horned owl.

A friend of mine was following one morning a fresh rabbit track through an open field. Suddenly the track came to an end, as if the creature had taken wings—as it had after an unpleasant fashion. There, on either side of his last foot imprint, were several parallel lines in the snow, made by the wings of the great owl that had swooped down and carried it off. Whatalittle tragedy was seen written there upon the white, even surface of the field!

The rabbit has not much wit, I once, when a boy, saw one that had been recently caught, liberated in an open field in the presence of a dog that was being held a few yards away. But the poor thing lost all presence of mind and was quickly canght by the clumsy dog.

I saw the same experiment tried with

I saw the same experiment tried with a red squirrel with quite opposite results. The boy who had caught the squirrel in his wire trap had a very bright and nimble dog about the size of a fox that seemed to be very sure that he could catch a red squirrel under any circumstances if only the trees were out of the way. So the boy went to the middle of an open field with his caged squirrel, the dog, who seemed to caged squirrel, the dog, who seemed to know what was up, dancing and jump-ing about him. It was in midwinter; the snow had a firm crust that held boy and dog alike. The dog was drawn back a few yards and the squirrel liber-ated. Then began one of the most ex-citing races I have witnessed for a long time. It was impossible for the look-ers-on not to be convulsed with laughers-on not to be convuised with laugh-ter, though neither dog nor squirrel seemed to regard the matter as much of a joke. The squirrel had all his wits about him and kept them ready for in-stant use. He did not show the slight-est confusion. He was no match for the dog in fair running and he discovered dog in fair running and he discovered this fact in less than three seconds; he must win, if at all, by strategy. Not a straight course for the nearest tree, but a zigzag course; yes, a double or treble zigzag course. Every instant the dog was sure the squirrel was his and every instant he was disappointed. It was in-credible and bewildering to him. The cat than Nig would be lying in wait for him and would make a meal of him. The early settlers in this country must have experienced something of this dread of apprehension from the Indians. Many African tribes now live in the same state of constant fear of the the slave-catchers or of other hostile tribes. Our ancestors, back in pretribes. Our ancestors, back in pre-historic times, or back of that in geo-logic times, must have known fear as a constant feeling. Hence the promi-nence of fear in infants and children nence of fear in infants and children when compared with the youth or the grown person. Babies are nearly always afraid of strangers.

In the domestic animals also fear is much more active in the young than in the old. Nearly every farm boy has seen a calf but a day or two old, which its mother has secreted in the woods or semote field, charge upon him furisquirrel dodged this way and that. The dog looked astonished and vexed. Then squirrel issued from between his hind legs and made three jumps towards the woods before he was discovered. Our sides ached with laughter, cruel as it may seem. It was evident the squirrel would win. It was evident the squirrel would win.

The dog seemed to redouble his efforts.
He would overshoot the game, or shoot by it to the right or left. The squirrel was the smaller craft and could out-tack him easily. One more leap and the squirrel was up a tree, and the dog was overwhelmed with confusion and dis-

He could not believe his senses. He could not believe his senses. "Not catch a squirrel in such a field as that? Go to, I will have him yet?" and he bounds up the tree as high as one's head, and then bites the bark of it in his anger and chagrin.

The boy says his dog has never bragged since about catching red squirrels "if only the trees were out of reach!"

When any of the winged creatures are engaged in a life and death race in that way, or in any other race, the tacof the squirrel do not work; the pursuer never overshoots nor shoots by his mark. The flight of the two is timed a if they were parts of one whole. A hawk will pursue a sparrow or a robin through a sig-zag course and not lose a stroke or half a stroke of the wing by reason of any darting to the right or left. The clew is held with fatal precision. No matter how quickly nor how often the sparrow or the finch changes its course, its enemy changes simultaneously, as if every move was known to it from the first.

The same thing may be noticed among the birds in their love chasings; the pursuer seems to know perfectly the mind of the pursued. This concert of action among birds is very curious. When they are on the alort a flock of sparrows, or pigeons, or cedar birds, or snow buntings, or blackbirds, will all take flight as if there was but one bird, instead of a hundred. The same impulses seizes every individual bird at the same instant, as if they were sprung y electricity.

Or when a flock of birds is in flight it is still one body, one will; it will rise, or circle, or swoop, with a unity that is truly astonishing. A flock of snow-buntings will perform their aerial evolutions with a precision that the best-trained soldiery cannot equal. Have the birds an extra sense which we have not? A brood of young partridges in the woods will start up like an explosion, every brown particle and fraguent hurled into the air at the same instant. Without word or signal, how is it done?

LETTERS TO THE TIMES.

Capital and Labor—The Poor.

Los Angeles, Feb 5.—[To the Editor of The Times.] In today's issue you describe the condition of the poor in the arge cities. No sane man will deny the accuracy of your statements. It deeply conarge cities. No sane man will deny the acturacy of your statements. It deeply concerns us to find the cause of such pitiable, hopeless poverty side by side with such enormous riches.

I almost beg for stating that all wealth is created by labor. This is so true as to be self-evident. Yet it is not commonly known.

If a man has wealth some one must have previously labored. Those women and children compiled, to the utmost, with the conditions governing wealth production. You say they "work from morning to night." They have been economical, for "it is not uncommon to taste no food for twenty four hours." twenty-four hours."

Have those men whose daily incomes are $10,000 to $30,000 exceeded the women $10,000 to $30,000 exceeded the women and children in complying with these conditions in the ratio that 50 cents bears to $30,000? Have they worked 60,000 times harder or longer per day, or have they consumed only one sixty-thousandth part as much individually as the workers? As they are in possession of this wealth they must have done one of these two things, or they are enjoying something to which they can lay no equitable claim.

must have done one of these two things, or they are enjoying something to which they can lay no equitable claim.

The workers receive 12 cents for labor on a garment and the material (the cost of which is another man's labor) say, is 24 cents. Now, if the selling price is more than 36 cents (labor and material) the workers will, obviously, not be able to buy it, as that is the limit of their purchasing capacity. Now, if the garment is sold for $1.08 the worker will have to make three to buy one. This is the real cause of the great disparity between the worker and the millionaire. millionaire.

For comparison, I have said the workers make three to get one—it is oftener ten to one. This makes it transparent that, as all wage-workers are working under similar conditions, the continuance of this sort of production inevitably sinks the worker into deeper poverty, with its concomitants, and the wealth of the employer increases in the the wealth of the employer increases in the exact proportion.

Is it not clear that the wealth created by the labor of those women and children is the identical $30,000 a day? Now, as to your remedy. The millionaire should take part of their own money and build lodgings for the workers, adding "philanthropy to 5 per cent." You do not say he would be a philanthrophist, but would be so "considered." The remedy would seem to lie in lessening the distance between the pauper and the millionaire, but this would increase it 5 per cent.

Subduing the Rabbits

Growers all know the pestiferous rab-bit; how easily and rapidly he girdles trees in young orchards, and the diffi-culty it is to keep the fellow out. An exchange announces that G. A. Hanson of Chino Valley has a remedy that is not only cheap and simple, but ef-fective. To one pound of aloes add the essential oils of the leaves of the blue essential oils of the letves of the blue gum and those of the pepper tree; the quantity to be about a two-quart meas-ure packed with leaves. These are grated with an ordinary grater, after which pour over each (separately) two quarts of beiling hot water, and over the pound of aloes four quarts. Let it stand for a few hours, then pur all quarts of beiling not water, and over the pound of aloes four quarts. Let it stand for a few hours, then put all three into one vessel, making eight quarts of liquid with which to wash the base of the trees. The adhesive quality of the essential oils of the follage gives a permanency to the wash when ap-plied that will remain on the trees for a long time. Trees submitted to an ap-plication of this solution last August have been left severely alone ever since by the rabbits.

On the other hand, the hunter of the whitetailed deer needs especially to show stealth and caution and to possess the capacity to hit a snap shot, running, at close quarters. The man who hunts the grizzly in thick timber often has to display a good deal of nerve and coolness In shooting antelope, however, the one quality of more use than all others is skill in handling the long-range rifle. Antelope are hunted in two ways; the first being with greyhounds on horse back, the second with the rifle. Now, in most game shooting, the shots are usually obtained at under a hundred yards. The shot at a white-tail is apt

In another moment they tore directly for the hill on which I was standing, and going straight to its base, sepa-rated into two bands, which, passing on either side of me within seventy-free yards, gave me an opportunity to kill one and wound another, which I eventu

Again. I remember once, while riding across the open prairie, seeing a body of six or eight antelope drawn up and looking at me. They were then within a half mile to one side of me. Being so far off I made no effort to go after them, but jogged along on the trail I was following. For some reason, however, they evidently thought I was trying to head them off, and after a few seconds' hesitation they made a dash obliquely to my line of travel. As soon as I saw what they were doing I put spurs to my horse and ran him as hard as I could along the trail. When the attelope saw my horse running they straightened out and went faster than before, but made no effort to alter their course or turn back, although they had the whole prairie behind them. By desperate running I succeeded in reaching a point where their line of flight crossed the trail almost at the very moment they did, and, leaping off my well-trained old hunting horse, I shot the master buck, a fine fellow with big horns, through the shoulders.

Usually, however, I have obtained my game while riding among the outlying cow camps and happening by chance Again. I remember once, while riding yards. The shot at a white-tail is apt to be a running one at less than that distance. The black-tail and big-horn are usually killed at from fifty to 150 yards. The prong-buck, or prong-horn antelope must usually be shot at greater distances. In no other kinds of game shooting are so many shots expended for every animal killed as in antelope hunting.

Usually, however, I have obtained my game while riding among the outlying cow camps and happening by chance upon bands; or else by making a regular hunt with the ranch wagon on prairies where the antelope abound and killing the sharp-eyed, pretty creatures by fair stalking and long-range shooting. Sometimes I have had to crawl for half a mile taking advantage of ing. Sometimes I have had to cran-for half a mile, taking advantage of every sage bush and big tuft of grass, before I could get in range, and even so I should hesitate to tell about the num-

In all its habits the prong-horn is the reverse of the white-tail deer. The white-tail deer relies mainly upon its nose, its sight being only ordinarily good. The prong-buck, on the contrary, trusts chiefly to its great, buiging eyes, situated right at the base of the horns, like a pair of twin telescopes. A white-tail spends the day in the thickest and most secluded cover and only ventures out at night. The prong-buck never goe to cover at all if it can be possibly avoiced and is quite as lively during the in California fruits, is greatly interesting. avoiced and is quite as lively during the day as at night. The white-tail is always seeking to avoid observation. It tries to escape danger by not being seen, trusting by choice always to its power of hiding and skulking. The antelope on the other hand, never tries to escape observation at all, but trusts purely to its own watchfulness. It does not care a rap whether or not it is seen itself, so long as it can see its foes.

The antelope is the beast of the prairie and the wide rolling plains. It can travel very fast for long distances, so it is often found many miles away from avoiced and is quite as lively during the

On the other hand, it will often stand still within range of very long shot and allow sounds of cartridges to be fired. probably only kick up the dust near by. It is always tempting the hunter to take a long shot at it, and it is for this reason that so many cartridges are fired for every head of antelope bagged.

One of the features of prong-back character is extreme curiosity, even when frightened or surprised, so great is its curiosity that in places where it is not much hunted it is often possible to not much hunted it is often possible to allure it toward the hunter by lying down and waving a red flag on the end of a stick. When the antelope sees such a performance going on it runs away a short distance, then goes slower, halts, runs to and fro, stamping the ground and snorting, and by degrees, in a succession of short runs, approaches to within range of the recumbent hunter. Under fits of panic and terror, the prong-buck will act without the least regard for its own safety and may plunge right into the danger it is seeking to avoid. Antelope follow one another like sheep and if an animal gets started in one direction the others follow it in a mad race and, by thus accompanying it, urge it forward along the path of destruction.

Once I remember trying to creep up on a band of twenty-five or thirty and the state of the st allure it toward the hunter by lying

Once I remember trying to creep up on a band of twenty-five or thirty antelope when I finally had to content myself with a shot from a distance of over 400 yards. I stood behind a hill as I shot and leaped out on the brink to see the result of my markmanship. My bullet merely knocked up the dust to one side of the master buck of the band. Away went the antelope in a compact body, but when they had run 100 yards or so they suddenly halted and came into line like so many cavalry, the brown and white facings on their necks and head giving them the appearance of being uniformed.

Cast Games of the Ban Jose-Apollo Series

Two games of baseball will be played at the First Street Park this afternoon, which will end the winter series. This will be the last opportunity of witnessing baseball in Los Angeles until the League season opens, and it will proba-bly be the last appearance, also, of Billy Hulen, Goodenough, Decker, Dungan, "Gentle Willie" Hassamer, Smith, Rappold, Darby, Phil Knell and the otherfa vorites on the local diamond.

The San Josés also have their local admirers, among the favorites being "Jiggs" Parrott. Charley Dooley, Big Bill Everett, "Blockers" Hanley and "Cousin Park". The best ball games played on the Coast this season have been put up by the San Josés and Apollos during the present series, and the two games this afternoon will doubtless be hotly contested.

It is not generally known here that "Jiggs" Parrott is a member of a noted baseball family. There are eight brothers, all born and raised in East Portland. Or. Their father is no slouch of a ball player himself, and for years the Parrotts had a standing challenge out to play any other family on the Coast a series of baseball games. They are all musicians, also, and the Parrott brothers' orchestra has quite a local reputation in Portland "Dode" Parrott, who used to play first base a few years ago, stands six feet five inches in his stocking feet. "Jiggs" and Tom Parrott, with whom the Los Angeles "fans" are acquainted, are hot favorites in Portland, and they now have a good record ail over the Coast.

DISTINGUISHED VISITORS.

Prominent People Soon to Visit the Coast.

The Trip Purely One of Pleasure, But i Passing a Look Will be Taken at Coast Defenses-A Long Journey Planned.

A distinguished party will leave New York Wednesday next to visit the Pa cific Coast, which point they will reach by easy stages from the South, says special dispatch to the San Franc Examiner of Friday. It is headed by Andrew Carnegie, the iron king, who will have as his special guest Sir Edwin Arnold. The remainder will in clude Mrs. Carnegie, her sister, Miss. Whitfield; a schoolmate, Miss Brown; H. C. Frick, principal partner of Mr. Carnegie; Mrs. Alexander King; Mr. Lindsay, Mr. Carnegie's secretary; President Andrew D. White of Cornell University and President Charles S. Smith of the New York Chamber of Commerce.

The trip, as thus far designed, is said to be entirely for pleasure. Mr. and Mrs. Carnegie have long desired to travel leisurely over the Pacific Slope and inspect its beauties and advantages. and inspect its beauties and advantages. The iron man has epent only one night in San Francisco in his life. That was some years ago, and the little he saw so whetted his appetite that he has been longing ever since to get sufficient time to do the trip justice. When asked as to whether public or private business had anything to do with the visit, he re-

"Business? Not a bit of it. We want to go to the land of Triumphant Democracy. We want to see the broad, glorious country out there and to plied: broad, glorious country out there and to feel the life and enterprise that throbs through the veins of the great people who make up its population. We Amer-icans who always remain in New York are not really Americans in the best sense of the word. We see and feel mainly what comes to us from Europe. What we need is to get the invigorating air of the great prairies into our lungs air of the great prairies into our lungs and let ourselves be inspired and re-newed with the spirit of the wonderful West. A true Scotchman ought to smell the heather and a true American

It is hinted that while Mr. Carnegie is in California he will take occasion to make a close survey of the coast and its equipment for defense in case of war. The late controversy with Chile caused considerable uneasiness even in New York on accout of the poor condition of the Pacific coast that is understood to prict in the matter of proper war. exist in the matter of proper war mu-

Upon his return it is believed, also, that Secretary Blaine, who is one of Mr. Carnegie's closest friends, will listen with interest to what he has to say on the subject. The latter, however, did not make any remark to indicate nental mission

Then Memphis and Chattanooga will be visited, and from there by easy stages the party will proceed to Los Angeles and Pasadena, where Mr. Vandervort, one of Mr. dena, where Mr. Vanuervort, one of Mr. Carnegie's partners, has been living for years because of ill health. Thence the course will be on to San Francisco. The rest of the party will leave Sir Edwin Arrold there and return by way of the Northwest, visiting Seattle. Tacoma and all principal points of the Sound country. Sound country.

Much interest has attached to Sir Edwin's visit to America, and he leaves New York regretting the necessity of a change of climate, and keenly regretted by hosts of friends that the genial Englishman has made during his visit. He was obliged to give up his readings because of grip and heart trouble. He was told to get out in the sunshine, and he became the guest of the iron king.

was told to get out in the sunshine, and he became the guest of the iron king. From San Francisco he will go to Japan, and after waiting for the rold months among his old haunts he all proceed to India, where he expects to successfully carry through a mission for the British government. This mission, while it appears simple enough on its face, has an important national bearing. At Buddna Gya, near Hatna, India, is the principal temple of the Buddhist religion, founded by the famous King Azoka, who was noted for his great learning. While Brahmnism is the permanent religion of India, it has become in the latter days but thinly disguised Buddhism. The temple of Buddha Gya is in the hands of the Brahmins. The Buddhists of Ceylon have Buddha Gya is in the hands of the Brahmins. The Buddhists of Ceylon have long desired to regain control of it, and have petitioned the English government to bring about the exchange. Their cause was warmly supported by Sir Edwin, who was given authority to accomplish the matter if it can be done peacefully.

The transfer of the temple would give an immense impetus to Buddhism, and should that religion again become dominant, Asia would be reunited, all of which is sufficient to indicate that the change would be of immense political advantage to England. Beyond India Sir Edwin's movements are undetermined.

GRANTED A NEW TRIAL.

Old Man Hoy Given Another Chance.

His Attorney Alleges That His Client Was Victimized.

Made a Catspaw of by a Gang of Conspirators.

Judge McKinley Thinks the Old Man Weak ided, and, as He Was Deceived, Should be Given an Opportunity to Right Himself.

In Department Six of the Superior Court yesterday morning John C. Hoy, the old man who was convicted of the the old man who was convicted of the forgery of Morris M. Green's signature to a $4000 mortgage with intent thereby to defraud O. A. Stassforth, on November 7 last, appeared before Judge McKinley to receive sentence. His counsel, J. G. the Court to set aside the verdict of the jury, and grant the defendant a new trial on the following grounds:

First—That the Court misdirected the jury on matters of law in the instruction given, and refused, to the jury.

Second—That the verdict was contrary to the law and evidence.

Third—That new evidence had been discovered as the second been discovered.

Third—That new evidence had been discovered, material to the defendant, which could not, with reasonable diligence, have been produced at the time of the trial.

In support of this motion the follow-ing affidavit was filed: State of California, county of Los An-

John C. Hoy, being first duly sworn, deposes and says:
That he is the defendant named in the above entitled action:
That on the 7th day of November, 1891, he was convicted of the crime of forgery in Department Six of said Superior Court; that upon said trial he testified that one Morris M. Green, the complaining witness herein, had personally authorized and directed him to sign the name of Morris M. Green to the alleged mortgage, for signing the name of said Morris M. Green to which deponent was convicted as aforesaid of the crime of forgery;
That on or about the 25th day of August, 1891, defendant, was in the city and county of Los Angeles, introduced by one Ed L. Baker to a person as Morris M. Green, and the said person so introduced himself to be Morris M. Green.

then and there represented himself to be Morris M. Green.
That said person so introduced as said Green employed and authorized deponent to sign said instrument:
That from the time of his said introduction by said Baker until the time when deponent testified in this court as aforesaid he verily believed that it was Morris M. Green in his own proper person, who had on or about said 25th day of August. 1891, employed and authorized deponent to sign the said name of Morris M. Green to said instrument;

on or about said 25th day of August, 1891, employed and authorized deponent to sign the said name of Morris M. Green to said instrument;

That from the time of said introduction until after his said conviction of the crime of forgery there never was a time, excepting a single instance stated hereinafter, when deponent at all doubted that Morris M. Green, the complaining witness herein, had personally authorized deponent to sign and execute said mortgage;

That when deponent first learned that one J. K. Stump was to testify in his behalf, having no knowledge of who said Stump was, he asked his attorneys who the man Stump was; that they dold him Stump was a man to whom said Morris M. Green had admitted of having employed and authorized deponent to sign and execute said mortgage; that afterwards, when said Stump was produced as a witness in said trial, deponent thought he recognized him as the identical person to whom he had been introduced by said Baker, and who had employed and authorized deponent to sign the name of Morris M. Green to said mortgage as aforesaid, and so informed his attorneys, and they assured him that he was mistaken and that said Stump was a truthful and reliable person who could not be mistaken as to the matters about which he was called to textify.

That afterward said Stump testified upon the said trial that he never saw deponent before the time when, and at the place where, said Stump was then testifying, towit: in the courtroom of Department Six of said Superior Court, and said Stump at the said time further testified that on the 27th day of August, 1891, said Morris M. Green and wife, upon his invitation, had come to his (Stump's) house to visit, and that on that day said Green in a conversation told him that he was at said Stump's heuse for the purpose of being absent from his place, in order that deponent might be at his own place to represent him for the purpose of borrowing some money on his land, and that he was glad Stump had extended the invitationated day before to come up and pa

Green te titled as appears from the record that on the night of the 6th of September, 1891, aid Stump came to his house and told him that he (Stump) had told Hoy to go ahead and make or sign the mortgage and that I would said right.

That after his said conviction, and after hearing the testimony of said Green, deponent b came convinced that he had been made a v. tim of these wicked and villathous conspirators, and had been led to commit or aid in the commission of a crime when he had no thought to do a wrong to any person;

That he had no knowledge of, or means That he had no knowledge of, or means of knowing, at the time of his said trial, that said conversation between said Green and said Stump was had, or that the statements alleged by said Green to have been made to him by said stump were made or taimed by said Green or any other person to have been made by said J. K. Stump.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 15th day of January, 1892.

John G. Rossiter, Notary Public.

The motion was argued pro and con, and upon being submitted to the court Judge McKinley said:

There is no doubt in my mind that the circumstances of the case, which were brought out fully in the Baker trial, showed the same was introduced to Hoy as Mornia.

brought out fully in the Baker trial, showed that Stump was introduced to Hoy as Moris M. Green and directed Hoy to mortgage the property, and that Hoy was used as a catspaw by the conspirators to obtain the money upon the mortgage. Hoy's fault was the testimony which he gave in the trial of his case. He must have had some doubts and misglvings as to the party who was intro and to him being the real Morris M. Green, and I have some doubts whether under all the circumstances I ought to grant a motion for a new trial after that testimony. But I have no doubt whatever that if the testimony as set out in this affidavit had been brought before the jury upon the trial of the case in the first instance the defendant would have been acquitted; that the jury would have been acquitted. the jury would have believed, as the Court is well satisfied that he was used as a catspaw by these other parties. I am also satisfied from his testimony and from hearing the testimony in both cases, that so far as business matters are concerned, while he is a man whom you would not say was of unsound mind, yet he is not of full business capacity, and is feeble-minded. Of course there would not be much excuse for a man who had sound business sense being entrapped in a scheme of this sort; but it is very evident that he had not, and that he was used for this purpose for that very reason, and was thus imposed upon by the others concerned in the fraud. I think that under all the circumstances of the case, under the showing made by this amdavit and my familiarity with the evidence, that it is my duty to grant a new trial in this case. The metion for a new trial is therefore granted.

How mankind loves a laugh! And what a chance the genus gets to turn loose his risabilities in that funny concoction, Mr. Wilkinson's Widows. It is one great slump of fun that lunges, leaps and ripples like a river on its way to the big waters.

The stream starts early, for the foun tain head is close up to the footlights when the curtain goes up, and the first situation between the head of the house and the maid of all work is so intensely droll that the audience gets right into the eddy of cachinnation and goes sailing along through two hours and a half of hilarity like a cork. The mirth starts with a ripple-a big rock of humor juts out into the current and the ripple expands into a dash of foam and spray that is evinced by one great spontaneous whoop from the audience which makes the filaments in the light globes dance again.

He has had the perspicacity to find the thing that tickles and he proceeds to tickle us with an abandon that is simply captivating. Such plays are a re-proof to the raw hands that inflict so-called comedies on the public that get their effects out of shapely legs in black hose, specialty dances. The company that has just gone from us was well up to the Frohman form and presented Mr. Gillette's latest success with intelligence and due effectiveness. We cannot but speak again of Mr. Holland's extremely clever work. He has grown into one of the very strongest actors in his line, on the American stage and fairly sparkles in the part of "Mr. Perrin." Miss Barrymore is stately and graceful and has all the fine points of clever stage business at her finger tips. The rest of the company are quite equal to the emergency and the entire performance is finished to a high degree.

May the Lord love all the players and the vlavmaker, and bring them back to as very soon!

The Los Angeles Theater will house tonight and tomorrow night an actor of great ability, who will appear in a character which he has made quite his own. Tames O'Neill in Monte Cristo is an attraction of a high standard. The company supporting him is nearly the same as that seen here in his last season and contains actors of ability. Were the plot of Monte Cristo not so familiar to the public it would be a pleasure to re-view it at this time, but it is fair to say that the play is full of thrilling interest and melodramatic effectiveness. We remember Mr. O'Neill's work as being imbued with fire and the spirit of chiv-alry, and that the drama's artistic points are brought out by him with fine

As this gentleman is a masterly player he will without doubt do a fine bit of work in this role. The balance of the company comprises the following well-known amateurs: W E. Pile, J. B. Dennis. V. Wankowski, Miss Gertrude Foster and Miss Gertrude Graham, Mrs. E. A. Pingree and Miss

On Tuesday night Hoyt's A Texas Steer will be seen at the Los Angeles Theater and has already been com-mended in these columns. This is a play—not a succession of variety specialties, and is said to be full of Roytisms that are striking and original.
We all know that Mr. Hoyt does not employ a surgical operation, after the Scotch fashion, to insert his jokes, but Scotch tashion, to insert his jokes, but at times in his dialogue he takes a bit of morality and implants it beneath the tuticle of his auditor. The play has had a great vogue wherever produced and the critics are agreed that it is a strong production.

On Tuesday and Wednesday next Bobby Gaylor will be seen at the Grand Bobby Gaylor will be seen at the Grand Operahouse in Sport McAllister, a farce-comedy that is a typical play of that sort. Mr. Gaylor personates a droll Irishman, there are some clever dancers Introduced, and a number of special features common to the piece of which this is a type. A certain portion of our amusement-lovers dote on this sort of theatricals and to those Sport McAllister will prove, without doubt, highly pleasing and enjoyable.

DR. HENLEY'S Celery, Beef and Iron cures more cases of weakness than any

A glimpse into the world of books is almost bewildering, so vast is the number presented. The attempt to desig nate the best books to be read by th young is a good deal like an attempt to determine which is the stateliest and most beautiful tree in an interminable forest of towering growths.

The world is rich in good books, and for the children of this age the best talent, the richest culture and the largesthearted men and women have been employed to write.

Charles Lamb used to say, after hi own genial manner, that he wished to ask a grace before reading more than a grace before dinner, appreciating, as he did, the richer and more satisfying feast that was offered his intellect through that was offered his intellect through the medium of good books.

But there are books and there are books. Says Mary E. Burt in her "Literary Landmarks," "Next to the Child who reads nothing at all, the child who reads too much is the most to be pitted, the child whose mind is a sieve through which all sorts of literary decoctions are strained; leaving behind only the refuse.

Baron Munchausen relates that he stopped at a spring at a market-place to water his panting steed. His horse drank uncommonly, with an eagerness pot to be satisfied. with an eagerness pot to be satisfied.
The Baron on looking backward found the beast cut in two, and the hind quarters clean gone, while the water ran out behind as fast as it ran in before ters clean gone, while the water ran out behind as fast as it ran in before without refreshing the animal at all. The children who imbibe unceasingly the weak teasteeped for them by people who write down to children are in much the same condition as was the Baron's horse. Their mental digestive organs have been cut off and the weak tea is pouring through them. Children generally start out with good literary stomachs. They have strong appetites and can digest many things, that, would discourage older people. Children should have as much as they can grow by. They should neither be started not over-fattened, nor should their, minds be dissipated by the casagless tide of juvenile literature which is fundating the land. The child who goes almost daily to the public library for a new book is on the road to literary debauchery."

book is on the road to literary debauchery."

There is much truthein the words of this author, and how to read and what to read is a matter of the utmost importance to the child, and one that should be religiously attended to by the parents. It has been said that the backbone of all knowledge is history. The reading which most interests the young child is that which likes to do with the relations has worsen parallel.

young child is 'that which' has by do' with the relations between people.

Among the popular authors which parents may read with their children is Washington Irving. No 'American writer takes a more successful hold upon the imagination of children. How the little folks delight in 'Rip Van Winkley' and the illustration of Children. the little folks delignt in "inp van Winkle" and the "Legend of Sleepy Hollow," and they will never tire of his "Tales of a Traveler," and they will find much to interest them in his "Sketch Book." Let even the dull child make the acquaintance of Cooper. Scott, Defoe and "Pligrim's Progress," and an interest in books cannot fail to be awakened. Then there are the old time Rollo books and the Jonas books by Abbott, the delight of which still lingers with me, a pleasant memory of my childhood. There are also the classics which are especially written for the young in which valuable knewledge is presented in an attractive way. Harper's Half Hour series include a good assortment of English classics, and they cost but 25 cents each. Dickens's "Child's History of En-gland" most children will read with eager interest, while Abbott's volume eager interest, while Abbott's volumes of "Early American History" cannot fail to please the young reader. Winchell's "Sketches of Creation," when read with a few words of running comment, will interest the thoughtful child and quicken his desire for further knowledge. Then may be mentioned Taylor's "Boys of Other Countries," Bonner's and Higginson's United States history books, "Swiss Family Robinson," "Tales from Shakespeare." Ab ott's "American Pioneers," Stanley' "Dark Continent;" and those portions of Bancroft's "United States" which describe the early settlement and the explorations of our country. If, after reading these, the little folks desire reading these, the little folks desire a change, give them the exquisite sketches of 'Rab and 'His Friends,' 'Marjorie Fleming,' 'Craddoch's 'Floating Down Lost Creek,' Cable's 'Grande Pointe,' 'Little Lord Fauntleroy,' 'Marble Faun,' 'The Mill on the Floss' and Victor Hugo's 'Tollers of the Sea."

Children will tearn to love works or natural history if they are written in a way to connect the interesting facts in troduced with human motives. Asso clate the lessons taught with such mo-tives and the child will receive from them the most lasting impressions. As an illustration take the following passages from John Burroughs and Virgil. Burroughs tells the reader that when a bee brings pollen into the hive he ad-vances to the cell in which it is to be deposited and kicks it off as a man might his overalls or rubber boots, making one foot help the other; then he walks off without ever looking be-hind him; another bee comes along and rams it down with his head and packs it into the cell as a dairy maid packs but ter into a jar; the bee evolves his war from his inner consciousness, and water his honey as a milkman waters his

Virgil says that "one king bee is andsome while another looks hideously handsome while another looks hideouslyugly, like a parched traveler coming from a dusty road, who spits dirt out of his mouth;" that "the bee has a mighty soul in a little body," and that "their battles can be checked by throwing a handful of dust over them." There are lessons in this that the child will not forget; and with interest and curiosity forget, and with interest and curlosity enlisted he will be anxious for further research.

Why," and the child who would not be why," and the child who would not be charmed by it is a rare exception. "Glaucus," by the same author, treats of the seashore and its changes, and is very readable, and Mary Treat's "Home Book of Nature" is full of entertaining Book of Nature" is full of entertaining knowledge in regard to plant life. Then there is a little book by Prof. Gray about "How Plants Behave." Books that are almost universally popular with children are Sarah Cooper's "Animal Life in the Sea and on the Land," a work that is beautifully illustrated; Mrs. Stowe's "Queer Little People," and Morse's "First Book on Zoölogy," while John Burrough's Essays, "An Idyl of the Honey Bee," "Tragedies of the Nest," "Sharp Eyes," "The Woodchuck," "Bird Enemies," etc., at once kindle a healthy love for nature and all her wonders.

I need not suggest other books, for the list of good books is almost inexhaustible, but I would say that between the author and the child the parent should act as interpreter, bringing out for him the various points of interest and making plain the thoughts conveyed. Happy the child whose home is filled with the companionship which good books afford and in his reading has the sympathy and companionship has the sympathy and companionship of his parents. LAY SERMONS.

What right has the Christian ever to be gloomy or despairing or doubting? None at all. Nor will he be if his heart is fully alive to the love of God, to His care for them, His watchfulness over him and to His wisdom which orders all things, seeing always the end from the beginning. Paul has told us how we should feel in times of trouble: "Sorrowing, yet always rejoicing."

Such a mental condition may seem a little paradoxical to one who knows nothing of the infinite, all-embracing love of the Heavenly Father. But the earnest Christian knows all about that deep underlying joy which sustains him when the waves of trouble roll over his head. Then it is he cries: "I know in whom I have believed."

There is comfort, when trials come upon us, in the thought that there are no apon us, in the thought that there are no chance happenings in this life—that infinite love rules and orders all things; inninte love rules and orders all things; comfort when we can say, "This sorrow is heavy to bear, but I know that our Father does not willingly grieve or afflict me. I must have needed the discipline or He would not have sent it. I will cast all my burdens upon Him, knowing that He careth for me."
"He careth for me!" What a thought knowing that He careth for me."

"He careth for me!" What a thought is this! Does it not make you feel safe, and courageous and triumphant! "He careth for me!" Then will He who orders all things let anything happen to me that will not be ultimately for my good! "These light afflictions which are but for a moment shall work for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory," and is not that "eternal weight of glory" worth suffering for worth of glory" worth suffering for, worth all our patient endurance of the trials of this transitory life? Can we hope to win the drown without first bearing the cross! Shall we not be patient and submissive under the chastisements of God's love when we remember that "The Lord loveth whom He chasteneth,

"The Lord loveth whom He chasteneth, and scourgeth every son and daughter whom He receiveth?"

Oh, the might and the power of that faith which is born of sorrow! It is strong, and trusting, and unfaltering. Out of sanctified adversity men come with new courage and with spirits purified. There is a majesty of soul about them that is Godlike. They have left Doubting Castle behind them and stand upon the perennial heights of the Delectable Mountains. Before them lie its "gardens and orchards, the vineyards and Mountains. Before them lie its "gardens and orchards, the vineyards and fountains of water. These mountains are Emmanuel's land." How broad is the sweep of the Christian's vision upon these mounts! Upon their clear heights he may behold the gates of the Celestial City. The land of Beulah is before him, "whose air is very sweet and pleasant," and there sing forever the hird of hope, and its atmosphere and pleasant," and there sing forever the birds of hope, and its atmosphere is forever fragrant with the blossoms of faith. The river of death lies beyond it, but upon its banks walk the shining ones and the glories of the life beyond lighten its shores. What though the rain of sorrow fails sometimes, it cannot shut out the glorious prospect. Through all the clouds the beams of God's love shine. Glad in God's promises we may walk securely and serenely through all darkness, walking by faith and not by sight.

There is such restfulness in the thought God knows best and "He careth for me." With this though tilling the Christian's soul he is not apt to rebel.

Christian's soul he is not apt to rebel. Not as I will but as Thou wilt; Thy will not mine be done," is the language of his spirit. There comes peace, even when our tears are flowing over the open graves of our loved ones, over our withered hopes. thered hopes.
"God knows, and He careth for me!"

It is like the triumphant shouts of vic tory sent up by conquering armies. The dead lie on the battlefield, victory is upon their ban-All that makes life dear and sacred has triumphed and the victors lose sight of the sacrifice which it has cost and the bugle notes are ringing with joy. And we are but soldiers, and shall we complain that in the battle of life there are some wounds, some loss, some disappointments? Shall we falter knowing that the Captain of our salva-tion will lead us on to victory?

Of all things that must grieve our Father is this lack of faith in Him; this questioning His love; this doubt of His goodness; this rebelling against His will. O Christian, leave your cares and burdens at the foot of the cross as did Bunyan's Pilgrim, then shall you go on your way singing for joy, strong for all the battles of life and though at times "sorrowing yet ever rejoicing."
"Henceforth my own desire shall be Another very attractive book is by Kingsley, "Lady How and Madame income the state and insurance business, and the formula real estate and insurance business.

Well, we have had a rain, a glorious rain that makes all nature and humanity in this section rejoice. dry, bare spots upon the hills where grasses have just thrust up the points of their tiny blades and then withered; where hungry cattle have stalked, finding scarce feed enough to sustain life. Hope springs up anew in everything. The birds carol more lightly; the bees hum a new song of gladness and the butterfly spreads his little golden wings with a fresh sense of delight. Nature is glad in her good old-fashioned way and is applying herself at once to the business of making things grow.

I've been watching a lily the past week as if it were a friend in whom I had especial interest, and it really seems to me as if it fairly reveled in the new condition of things since the rain. I put the bulb out in the ground the day before the rain came, and since then its growth reminds me of the marvelous uplift of Jack's bean stalk. I look at it every night and can see the appreciable growth that it has made through the day. "Behold the lilies of the field, how they grow; they toil not, neither do they spin, yet I say unto you that Solomon, in all his glory, was not ar-rayed like one of these."

I frequently wonder as I go out into the fields and onto the hilliops that peo-ple at large do not study nature more, for she is full of surprises. And here in this land she is the mother of the marvel-ous. There is a variation of light and

I have seen the grandest panoramic views on the old Sierra fronts when clouds were piled upon their crests or hung low in the sky above them. I have seen views that it seemed to me could hardly have been excelled by the transcendant glories of the mount of transfiguration, when the sides of the Sierras were velled with cloudy curtains through which flashed the volleyed arrows of the sunshine. I have watched the cloud effects which the volleyed arrows of the sunshine. I have watched the cloud effects which seemed to thrust the mountaintops higher and higher into the heavons, apparently increasing their altitude by at least 1000 airy feet.

Then I have gone down into the valleys and upon the lesser hills, where upon the foothill stopes the glory of the sunset was painted in glowing acres of golden poppies. I have watched the wind breathe amid the palms, and smelt the fragrance of millions of orange flowers. I have seen long lines of blossoming callas lift their faces to the January suns, and seen the rainbowed wonders of chrysanthemum gardens, and breathed the fragrance of lemon, verbend and heliotrope. I have watched the called the vertical and the proposed was the called the seed of the parameter of the watched the called the seed of the watched the watched the watched the seed of the watched the and breathed the fragrance of lemon, verbend and heliotrope. I have watched the golden-breasted oriole as he flitted amid the green boughs of the cedar, and the happy humming-bird as it fluttered upon the tips of the flowers, and heard the bees' glad hum and seen the flush of light in the butterfly's pathway, and then I have gone out into the green flelds, where the slender grasses were growing and the green blades of corn and wheat were thrusting up their heads; I have looked into the black eyes of the gay young squirrel, and seen the heads; I have looked into the black eyes of the gay young squirrel, and seen the twinkle of the gopher's vanishing glance, while over all this shone the cloudless sun, and the balmy air was filled with the sweet breath of universal bloom, and then I have gone back to the haunts of man and heard them complain "what a dull world this is," and wonder if there were indeed any pleasure in living. pleasure in living.

Now I think that such a questioner must be blind, all wrapped up in self, all unresponsive to the untold marvels of beauty about him which ought to soul. Nature. when she apeaks right home to us, has a lan-guage that gladdens the heart. There is nothing morbid about her, and her tendencies are to lift us out from ourselves into the broader atmosphere of the world. She has a thousand voices, if we will but listen, which speak to all our moods, and soothe and cheer us. But these are men who never see in a tree but so much timber never see in a tree but so much timber teat may be burned, or that may be utilized for building. Men who lose sight of all the glory of green boughs and swaying leaves and the rich mosaics of light and shade—men to whom the beauty of manifold form and color never appeal and who go on like plodding over seeing nothing but the next. ding oxen, seeing nothing but the nar-row path before them.

I think it is a grand science to learn how to live and how to look about you. Large-visioned men are never poor. Men with open ears hear always a thousand melodious voices and life grows grand and large, full of the riches which nature holds in her vast storehouse of beauty. To such men life is a perpetual psalm and an unfailing

We have a veritable Munchausen in our midst, and the tales that he has to tell untailingly make the heart of the small boy palpitate with delight. Not long ago he was telling of a valuable dog that he had, who is one of the fleet-est-footed of his kind. 'I had him," est-looted of his kind. "I had him," said he, "out in the country and he was on a coyote's trail." I tell you he ran

"He had to tail."

"He had to stop then, didn't he?" inquired the boy, who was listening in open-mouthed wonder.

"Stop! No! you bet your life he didn't. I was up with him in a second and I clapped the two parts together and he ran straight on. But in my hurry I got two.legs up and two down," was the quick response.

"But he couldn't run as fast with the two legs as he did with four," interpupted the small boy.

"O yes he could," replied the nar-rator, "for when he got tired of ran-ning on the two lower legs he just rolled over and ran on the other two, and the way he came down on that coyote was a caution. It did not take long for that race to end, and the dog came off the victor."

CHILE'S BATTLE FLAG.

A Striking Resemblance to the Confederate Flag.

The resemblance between the old tandard of the Confederacy and the present hanner of Chile is both apparent and real, says the Chicago Inter Ocean.

The Southerners at first floated in deflance a flag described heraldically as "gules, a jesse argent, on a canton azure fourteen stars of the second."
The Chilean emblem is "per jesse argent and gules, on a canton azure a five-pointed star on the first."

ine-pointed star on the first."
In eyery-day, English the difference is this: The South bore three bars, red and white, with fourteen stars of white or a blue ground in the center; the South Americans have two bars, white and red, with a single white star on a blue ground in the corner.

Both were evilently framed from our own Stars and Stripes. The identity of the field of the two divided, as is ours, into white and red; the star or stars of white on a blue background in the up-per corner, like the great North Amer-ican constellation, now containing so proudly forty-four points of brightness and union; the colors dear in song and story of red, white and blue, all point to an evident desire to pattern after the Great Republic.

In the Chilean coat semblance ceases. It is worthy of note that it is capable of proper blazoning, showing greater skill than exists in most of the States of this Union, which have defaced their great seals with meaningless landscapes and agricul-tural implements, ignoring the profound symbolism and scholarly accuracy of the gentleman's science of heraldy.

The description runs thus in the achievement:

Crest, three plumes proper.
Supporters, dexter, a condor proper;

here no less than the fashion of the United States was copied for the flag. The unicorn, that fabled beast with a single horn growing from its forehead and a tail like a fancy scroll, but other-wise a horse, occupies exactly the same position in the arms of Great Britain, as all know who remember the old nurs-ery rhyme of "The lion and the unicorn a-fighting for the crown."

The three patrick plumes have been

The three ostrich plumes have been since the days of the Black Prince the peculiar and distinctive crest of the Prince of Wales and their adoption here can hardly be explained as an ac-cident, while with the unicorn the chance of a mere coincidence is lessened to an absurdity.

The condor, that great bird of the Andea, seems the only native or original idea in it. What it means can only be surmised—it may be typical of the feroclous and uncivilized methods of warfare the Chileans have always used, not as excusable as the bloodthirsti-ness of the bird of prey, or it may be significant of the nauseous messes with which this huge vulture gorges himself and so of the crow-eating dish prepar-ing for their headstrong little republic. The similarity of the two national standards will be very apt to result in confusion. During the civil war the rebels were forced to resign their imperfect copy of the old flag for this reason and adopt an entirely different battle flag.

On a clear day and near at hand the stars and stripes of the Anglo-Saxon and the stars and bars of the Latin have little resemblance. But if they are renoved to a distance the red and white of the two fields become a mere pink in appearance, while the effect of the star or stars on the dark blue bunting used for the Union is only that of light-ening the blue. And when the smoke of battle engulfs them, by land or by sea, allowing but a momentary glimpse of the two national emblems, the difficulty

It is not often that a dying man re-gards his approaching dissolution with the scientific serenity of the venerable Dr. Richet, who was carried off the other day by congestion of the lungs. He was attended by his son, a professor of physiology, and by another medical man, and while ill actually delivered man, and while in actuary derivered a lecture on the development of his terrible malady, describing its symptoms and detailing its progress with a more than stoical calmness and indifference to his fate. Stranger still, he said that when those who were attending him observed certain signs in the course of the disease his death would be only a matter of a few seconds. THE "TIMES" EAGLE.

I have not had more fun in a coon's age than in watching people tramp up the stairs to the den of the boss copy killer beneath my perch, with propo sitions about how to spend that surplus which was left over from the press feed a few days ago.

There is no use talking, the American public can get stuck on a surplus quicker than any people on earth, and they can lay for it with a persistence that is absolutely away up.

The first chap that came lumbering around the corner of the stone castle had some sort of a hen show that he thought could utilize the little sack, thought could utilize the little sack, with a grace and abandon that would be too cute to live, and he poured forth an argument in favor of his pet idea that was fairly eloquent with feathers and fresh hen fruit. The next man and brother was not that kind of a chap at' all, but instead wore skirts and a cunning little bonnet with a flower garden on it. Speaking of another editorial gang that is said to be meditating a trip thusward, this bird desires to say in all good faith and for publication only that if it isn't editors with domes of thought on them reaching skyward they had better not come around this perch or they will get a claw in them. I dote on regular old Faber-punchers that write eight and nine-column editorials on 'How to Keep Weevils Out of French Restaurants' and 'The Evil of Unlimited Jags on a Reporter's Efficiency,' killing thereby much English as she is writ by the fellows that get a salary for writing it, but I dont want to have any more of the razzle-dazzle, fly-by-night friends of The Dry Goods Curset and Hook and Eye Chronicle or the Patent Medicine Evangelist worked off on us for glittering specimens of journalism. It would be as much as his life is worth for the Super intendent of Streets to venture down there, and if the Common Councilman that bosses that ward should get stalled in the gloaming one of these late after-noons the populace would chuckle fit to split. Take a Sunday off and go down and look at the ruin, it is a sight tostagger the intellect.

The Eagle remembers away back in war-times, when cannon wheels were checkering the land with ruts and the "winding rivers were red" with the blood of my country's braves, that an organization came into existence called "Union League." What great big, gallant body it was! What great big, gallant patriots, soldiers, statesmen and gentlemen from civil life were they who made up its personnel. And what service did they not do for the giorious Union of the States of North America? They stood behind the fighters at the front, encouraged them with a backing that encouraged them with a backing that was heroically magnificent, coppered the copperheads, aided in throttling treason, and in fact became one of the mortal Uncle Abraham of blessed memory, in that awful epoch when the fate of freedom trembled in the scale—when mankind's last hope was palled in gloom—and disaster ran riot, with lead and fire, through the days of terror.

That organization, as it is clearly remembered by all who are old enough to have lived in the bloody sixties, was never found pushing men as men, nor strongest arms reached out to the Im fostering the fortunes of cliques or ca-bals. It had no aim but the noble one of doing its country's service, of cir-cumventing the machinations of its enemies and strengthening the cause of freedom for all men in this land that until then had the curse of slavery upon it.

until then had the curse of slavery upon it.

Since that hour other "Union Leagues" have been formed, and the Eagle sees one from here, if not more than one. I cannot read hearts, nor minds, but I fear the only thing in common between the gallant old order that was a terror to traitors in the black days back yonder is the hollow and empty name. I see men "working" things inside the new concern for personal ends; I see men under suspicion of having been false to honorable trusts hoping to "square" things through the medium of the "League"—I see the great and honored name a by-word, and the principles which it maintained so far departed from as is the sun from Venus—I see it full of cliques, intriguing to put some favorite in place and other cliques favoring some other favorite. voring some other favorite.

And the heart of the Eagle is stirred with grief, for the old "Union League" was so grand, so great and so powerful, its aims were so lofty, its men were so magnificent, that it seems sacrilegious that smaller humans should get in and smudge the escutcheon of an order that was once a mosaic of honor, patriotism, genius and statesmanship.

The time is ripe today for men of honor and honesty, but alas! they are quiescent and too many times a "gang" is running the old machine.

A Verdict in Favor of the Defenda

Faulty Translation.

The Goytino libel suit was soon disposed of in Justice Owens' department of the Police Court yesterday afternoon. The case was continued over from Friday evening at 5 o'clock, and it was believed that it would take up several days in the trial, but the prosecution discovered during the afternoon that they were working under a great disadvantage, as the libelous article in the body of the complaint had not been properly translated, and also for the reason that the prosecuting witness, who is in the northern part of the State, positively refused to come down and prosecute the case.

While it is possible that the article, which is of the French humorous style, may have been intended to injure the young woman who swore to the complaint, no two interpreters could be found to agree as to the exact meaning of the article.

found to agree as to the exact meaning of the article.

Several hours were devoted by the prosecution yesterday afternoon in proving that the article came from the pen of the defendant, and that it was published at his instigation.

When the prosecution closed the defense stated that they had no testimony to offer, and as neither side cared to argue the case it was given to the jury. The jury was out only five minutes when they came into court and rendered a verdict of not guilty, on the grounds that the article as translated in the complaint seemed to be at variance with the original article as translated by the court interpreters.

The defendant was discharged, and this enda the first of the French editor's libel cases.

which the Musical Courier comments very justly:

There is one class of people to whom a rainy day is a blessing. They are the professional music teachers of the city who have studios where they give instructions. Such of these as are well-known and popular have a clientéle that fills every hour of the day. On a stormy day the chances are that not one in four of the pupils will show up for their lessons, this being especially true in the case of young ladies and girls. The result is that the teacher has practically aday of leisure.—[Tmes.

And why shouldn't 'hey enjoy that leisure? The life of a music teacher is a hard, unthankful one at its best, and if pupils were allowed to say when they would take their lessons the income of a teacher would be seriously impaired by the end of the season. That very restrictive clause, which should be in every contract bill of a professional teacher, is the only guard he or she has against the caprices of a pupil or the vagaries of the great American weather prophet, Farmer Dunn. Mr. Sherwood may not play quite as well as Paderewski, but, though I never heard either, I've seen their pictures and can testify that our American is very little behind the European artist in the matter of hair. Pad's capillary aureole, however, seems to present the more frenzied appearance to the casual observer.

Answer. The singular taste-metallic-of the oysters which were bought by me in 1887, and which I supposed, as they were called "Eastern," had been brought by train to California in ice, and had thereby acquired a tinny taste. Inquiry elicited the information that no systers existed on this Coast-except the small native—the volcanic era probably having destroyed all the larger species. I then learned that dealers in species. I then learned that dealers in San Francisco brought out seed oysters, from the size of a pea to that of a quarter dollar, from Connecticut Sound, and these were dumped at various places into the bay and allowed to grow amid the deposits dally along the bottom from the sewers of San Francisco. The solid sewerage went into the mud, and the llouids mixed in with the bay water. solid sewerage went into the mud, and the liquids mixed in with the bay waters and ebbed and flowed constantly where the oysters could be saturated with and feed upon both. Being much surprised at this condition I wrote a letter to Morat this condition I wrote a letter to Morgan & Co., asking why not commence the propagation of oysters from their own spawn—and elicited no response. I presume they considered it impertinence, and that they could attend to their own millions of profits at their high prices without suggestions from me

Q. You have given some attention to the matter of propagating oysters on the Pacific Coast. Tell The Times about that. What attempts have been made, and why did they fail?
A. For years I have been much interested in the scientific experiments in this country and European countries to secure this cheapest and best of foods. Being a great deal of my time along the Atlantic Coast and observing the oyster reefs, and the transplanting, I had gath-ered a great deal of practical knowl-edge, and therefore understood more fully the work of the Fish Bureau and the volumes sent to me by various Sen-atorial friends. After learning the condition on the Pacific, and that nocondition on the Pacific, and that nobody had been able to produce spawn from oysters brought to this Coast, though often attempted since the completion of railways—I became more interested in the discovery of why this result had not been reversed. Only one man in the Government Bureau seemed ever to have fathomed the reason why the germ of the oyster was destroyed—and he simply asked a question of three lines. After a patient study of the subject in 1888 and 1889 I became perfectly convinced that I knew how to accomplish the propagation. I pursued my investigations from Connecticut Sound down to Virginia, and was thoroughly assured from the statements of the best cultivators, largest dealers and shippers by vessels, that the oyster of the best cultivators, largest dealers and shippers by vessels, that the oyster was emasculated by the concussion of the train. The oyster is hermaphrodite—male and female in same shell. I prepared proper methods to overcome this steriity, and enlisted Wells-Fargo officials to carry out my views—and then had the positive promise, in letters from the Fish Commissioner, that he would establish a missioner, that he would establish a station near Los Angeles to make proper experiments—and that the officers would be directed to cooperate with me. The expense of such an undertaking would be very heavy for an individual—but the Government for the benefit of the people could easily do what an individual unaided might not accomplish. The Albatross could have been kept in these waters during the winter at no further expense; and the whole ques-tion could have been solved long ago. I made that suggestion, and the Alba-I made that suggestion, and the Albatross was sent here—but navigated for hundreds of miles seaward—and the commissioner broke every promise made to me. If I had been a Republican and having influence with the administration I would have camped some weeks in Washington to get a man appointed who had vision sufficient to see beyond the coast line of Virginia. Secretary of State Bayard gave me letters, requesting the United States Minister and the consuls in Mexico to aid me in the purposes which I expected the Fish Commissioner to inaugurate. And responses came promply, giving information and readiness to aid. Sefior Romero gave me the most cordial letters to the Mexican Cabinet, which I still have and which I had expected to present in person and get permission for the Albatrost to the Mexican Cabinet, which to present in person and get permission for the Albatross to obtain loads of oys-ters in the Gulf of California, where ters in the Gulf of California, where, there are fen thousands of millions of the finest in the world, but no means of shipping them here, no vessels plying from those beds to any portion of California. I found places on this coast with ample supplies of fresh artesian water easily to be secured at small expense. Oysters cannot be raised to advantage without proper admixture of pense. Oysters cannot be raised to advantage without proper admixture of salt and fresh water and proper food for the oyster to fatten upon. The waters must be pure and the food therein comes from certain water-plants and from the loamy mud of the bottom. The best oysters in the world are the Lynnhaven Bay of Virginia, and these are best cysters in the world are the Lynn-haven Bay, of Virginia, and these are thrown into the mad of the coves, all oysters going down hinge foremost, and, if nearly covered by the mud, able to open their shells above and thus feed securely though almost wholly im-bedded.

securely though almost wholly imbedded.

I did make arrangements to attempt the experiments individually by getting a location near Ballona, where I expected to have the cooperation of Col. Baker and others, but the agitation of laying the sewers down the Ballona was sufficient to cause me to abandon the propagation scheme as utterly unwholesome and abominable if sewerage was to be conveyed there—making an unfit food for even a hog—and poisonous to a human being.

Hancock Banning was kind enough to offer cooperation and use of his magnificent land near Newport, and went with me there to inspect it. I did not think it feasible from want of fresh water supply—but the recent tapping of vast artesian flows makes it different, and will bring Newport and its adjacent lands into prominence soon in many ways. I found another good place, but the owners were unwilling to sell even twenty acres from which I could gain access to the State waters. "It was not in the market," and as I could not overcome property rights, there was no use of considering that location, how-ever beneficial it might be made to the whole of California and adjacent terriever beneficial it might be made to the whole of Cajitornia and adjacent territory. Perhaps the next year or two, if I retain health, may develop something of greater interest. My object in devoting myself to labor and expense at my age was twofold—to create cheap food and to protect and care for the helpless. My success in such an undertaking would have developed a great fortune—which I do not need—but which it was and is my intention, if success does crown my efforts, to devote to the establishment of an asylum, wherein all the humble and needy orphans throughout the entire State might find a shelter and a home, to be protected and educated and become useful citizens in the future. The true view of philanthropy is to aid the children and the destitute women, and to ameliorate suffering by means of hospitals, instead of endowing additional universities and building palaces and cathedrals.

O. Can the parent overter be trans-cathedrals.

Q. Can the parent oyster be transported from the East or South, and transplanted here successfully?

A. Certainly, That is what the Morgan company first did in the nasty waters of the bay. But they did not spawn. The small seed-oysters have since been for years gathered along the coast of Connecticut, placed in barrels, ranging from 15.000 to 20.000, and shipped from New Haven to San Francisco. The oysters of Connecticut Sound have been famous, but in late years vast beds have been destroyed; and the oysters have a metallic taste, caused by the immense quantities of acids thrown from the myriad manufactories and which are brought down by acids thrown from the myriad manufactories and which are brought down by the streams, and in addition there are vast quantities of sewage from the numerous large cities. The offspring of these oysters inherit the quality, and hence the metallic taste out here, increased by the impurities of the bay. These seed oysters remain two or three years and grow to large size. From These seed oysters remain two or three years and grow to large size. From that cause and their uniformity the saloons, restaurants and hotels—whose managers do not care what is the origin of food which they can so readily dispose of—have been large consumers of these oysters. and grocers and others have, without inquiry, handed them out to customers for the profit. Dr. Connell, several years ago, ventilated the whole subject, and pointed out in the San Francisco journals how dangerous these oysters were to human health. There oysters were to human health. oysters were to human health. There were no other oysters to be obtained, and so the monopoly continued its triumphant course of coining shekels at most exorbitant profits. It would require a very large expenditure of money to duplicate such an establishment as the Morgans in this vicinity. The cost of the barrel of seed and freight and handling would be not less than $40. of the barrel of seed and freight and handling would be not less than $40. The Morgan output has been vast in numbers—probably not less than an average of 100,000 oysters per day; probably 40,000,000 per year. To secure this, as not one-third of the plant lives, there must be an outlay (besides cost of boats, land, buildings, etc.) of $250,000 the first year, and the same the second year, for such a machine as the Morgans'. The income would roll in the third year. One hundred thousand oysters daily at the price they sold for up to Christmas last—2½ cents each—would bring in the royal wages of $2500 per day, of which $2000 would be clear profit. At the present time the Morgan Company, at 50 cents per can, make at least 25 present time the Morgan Company, at 50 cents per can, make at least 25 cents profit.

Q. What local spot or spots hereabouts are suited to the experiment? How would you proceed?

A. Ballona—the canon north of Santa Monica,—Alamitos Bay and Newport would all be suitable. The small seed oysters could be procured just as has been done elsewhere and with persons skilled in the business the beds could be planted. The seed is taken every year now from the coasts of Maryland and Virginia and planted along the shores of Connecticut, Long Island and New Jersey, principally to supply the New York market. It would be unwise in anybody not skilled in the cultivation to attempt it, as the whole would probto attempt it, as the whole would probably be lost. The oyster has many enemies, especially the drum fish, which mashes the shell and eats them. Beds mashes the shell and eats them. Beds of millions of oysters are destroyed in a month by the starfish, which swarm in these waters. My experiments would be not only with the seed oysters, but to bring from a score of native beds the best oysters 3 to 5 years old and prepare them to spawn, and taise oysters in that way. One bushel of oysters thus propagating would enable me in five years to supply the entire Pacific Coast with the best possible ovsters at 10 cents a dozen and cost of freight to any locality.

Q. What of the present status of the retail oyster trade in this city?

A. The whole machinery of trade, by which consumers are supplied, is. as it has been, in the hands of the Morgan company. As to how many they are selling I do not know. I think not a great many, with all the parade, and the signs at all the groceries and restaurants that "Eastern" oysters are for sale. The discussion and the cheaper price has induced thousands of people to eat oysters who never touched cheaper price has induced thousands of people to eat oysters who never touched them before. They are, in fact, gorged at present, and I don't think many of the Morgans are sold, though thousands of cans are displayed. How fit these are for food after being kept a week orten days anybody may determine for himself. I have sold as many as 15.000 oysters per day; and I prefer to disappoint scores of people who may want them on a particular day rather than keep them on hand, though mine are under a ton of ice and kept all the time at about 40°. My aim is to sell out every day and have fresh ones the next morning. Pure, good oysters, kept at 40°, would be in excellent condition for two weeks if held in good tin. The tin on this Coast is not good, having too much lead in the wash to stand the acid of an oyster, and so the lead dissolves and the food becomes poisonous. It may be assumed that the price of oysters will never go up again under any It may be assumed that the price of oyseters will never go up again under any circumstances. Such oysters as those from the Louisiana and Texas coast are

There is one exceptional contingency—the advance in the Eastern oysters. from which the supply must come until spawning on this Coast is successful. The destruction of oyster beds from the excessive consumption has gone south to the Chesapeake, and the dealers are sending out much younger and smaller oysters. During the past year the advance in prices along the Atlantic, and of course in the interior, was about 80 per cent. The Gulf of Mexico is now becoming the reliance of all points where they can compete with Atlantic oysters, and the supply may probably where they can compete with Atlantic ovsters, and the supply may probably be abundant for ten years. But with the improvidence of Americans to let grass grow of itself instead of cultivating, there will be a scarcity and high prices in ten years.

Q. Where do our supplies now come from and what are the difficulties, if any, encountered by importers and dealers! Are the rates of transportation reasonable or excessive?

able or excessive?

A. The only fields open to Los Angeler and Southern California are the Gulf of Mexico—besides the unfit Mor gans. There is no chance to bring any of the excellent oysters from the Atof the excellent oysters from the Atlantic—the beds extending from Baltimore to Florida. The transit is so leng from Baltimore or Norfolk—six days by express—that the oysters would be stale and dangerous and the freight prohibitive. They come packed in wooden boxes with forty or fifty pounds of ice. If a warm day should intervene, and the ice melt, the oysters would purrify like rotten fish and swell up. They would be sour, and anybody eating such a disgusting mess would run the risk of cholera. In shipments to me the boxes are re-iced at El Paso, and a third time at Yuma. I can reach the gulf in sixtyare re-iced at El Paso, and a third time at Yuma. I can reach the gulf in sixty-two hours at Galveston, and am now seeking some point west of Galveston where the oysters are of great size and magnificent flavor. If I can arrange that, Southern California will, never touch another Morgan. The gulf is the natural source for Southern California and Arizona until we can reach the Yaqui and Arizona until we can reach the Yaqui River in the Gulf of California. If the Morgans are not content with their amassed millions and the territory, north of the Tehachepi, and continue to prowl around these localities, I will to prowl around these localities, I will establish depots in San Francisco and all their northern localities and put their prices down to 50 cents. Biloxi and Mississippi City, east of New Orleans, furnish great quantities of fine oysters. These will be brought here. Also the Barrataria. Morgan City is a great depet for Apalachicola Bay. Cote Blanche Berwick Bay, Vermillion. Calcasien, Sabine, etc.

The rates of freight in great part govern the importation of food. Sugar

The rates of freight in great part govern the importation of food. Sugar is shipped by the Southern Pacific at 65 cents per 100—but shell orsters at owner's risk at $2.06. That, of course, prohibits the receipt here of shell oysters, or fish of splendid quality, woodcock, prawn, soft-shell crabs, etc.

The rates by Wells-Fargo, the only express company, are similarly prohibitive. The latter claim that the rates demanded by the railways give no option, and that they must make their tariff so high to realize any profit. That will all probably soon be tested, as I have made a special request of Senator Cullom to add one line to the Interstate Commerce Jaw—'Express companies are included herein." Then the question could be raised whether the rates are included herein." Then the question could be raised m." Then the question could be raised whether the rates were "reasonable and just," and which was in fault, the railway or the express. The local officials here of both the express and the ciais here of both the express and the Southern Pacific have shown a willingness in every way to build up a cheap food for the public, but the machine is not under their control, and they mast obey the rates and tariffs prescribed by their superiors, only $6 per $100 pounds, including the package! It can actually buy the oysters at several points for a sum less than the expressage! And so the public is still denied even a cheaper rate, which I had hoped to fix. At some points on the Texas coast, if I can reach them and obtain ice, I could buy two pounds of oysters. for 10 cents. The express charges are now about 17 cents for a two-pound

The best oysters I am now receiving The best oysters I am now receiving are from Berwick Bay, near Morgae City. The shippers go all along that coast up to the Texas bays and get good oysters at all the points I have named. They grow in immense native beds, and in pure ocean water, or, in the cores wherein clean rivers pour, and nowhere within 100 miles of even a barre. within 100 miles of even a barrel of within 100 miles of even a barremor, sewage.

Q. What of this current story that the Duke of Clarence died from eating, poisoned oysters? Is it possible that people anywhere run the risk of buying sewage fed oysters?

A. The most eminent medical at the title of the bound that the control of the control of did die from the Thames sewage—so poisoned as to produce typhoid fever. It is precisely the same as eating the beef from swill-fed cattle; or the milk; beef from swill-fed cattle; or the milk; or the pork from hogs fed on rotten garbage and putrifying cattle entrails as described in the San Francisco papers; last year. There are no health officers to intervene and prescribe what is healthy or unhealthy, and so the vendor in this country sells just what he pleases. Medical science says that milk, and beef, and pork, as described, engender typhoid and kills. The milk, and beef, and pork, as described, engender typhoid and kills. The German government thought so in prohibiting our pork. And athous sands die from poisonous food, and their illness is generally ascribed to bad plumbing, sewer gas, etc. I have avoided the Morgan oyster, rarely touching one, since I knew how they were fed. I have no doubt the Dukedied as described. The Thames is the filthiest of all streams and London is the only city (except San Francisco) which has oysters planted in its sewage along the river for over thirty miles. along the river for over thirty miles, a For curiosity I intend to have a Morgan oyster analyzed, and then see how long it will require to putrify when exposed to the air. Two years ago I found some of the city water would putrify and stink if left in a pitcher thirty hours. I may be mistaken, but I think the Morgan oyster will do something similar, with the thermometer at 70° in the open air. If so it is utterly unfit for food even when newly opened.

A great many people speak of ready-made clothing as "STORE CLOTHES," just as if they were made by carpenters or blacksmiths. Now we want you to distinctly understand that the clothing we keep is made by TAILORS. There are bad tailors as well as bad carpenters. WE KNOW what manufacturers employ GOOD MEN and those who employ CHEAP MEN. We have our own tailors to make all necessary alterations. Our head bushelman gets $25 per week. We can get men for $15 a week, but we want the best.

Speaking of the improvement in ready-made clothing as compared to former years, we cannot illustrate it better than to remind you of the same improvement in shoes (although we do not keep shoes.) A few years ago every other man had his shoes made to order and paid $10 and $12 for them. Today he buys a more stylish shoe ready made for $6. So it is with clothes. We are today dressing some of the wealthiest men and best dressers in this town, simply because we keep the latest styles and best makes. Every garment we sell bears our own label. The Late "King" of Paris, M. Alphaud.

His Successful Work-Placed in Office by Napoleon III,

With the Design of Giving Health and Beauty to the City.

For Over Thirty Years He Has Labored in the Cause—His Methods and His Signal Success-An Interesting Sketch.

PARIS, Jan. 25 .- [Special Correspondence of The Times.] "The greatest funeral since Victor Hugo's," was what neral since Victor Hugo's," was what all Paris said when, on December 11, it followed to the grave the remains of its late "king," M. Alphaud, the man who, in the last thirty-seven years, has transformed the city until by general consent it is the most beautiful in the

It is safe to say that in the history of cities there is not to be found another man who, for so long a time has exerman who, for so long a time has exercised so great power so unselfiishly and so beneficeutly as M. Alphaud. The title of 'king'' was no misnomer. In the offices he filled, the power he exercised, the obedience he received, the influence he exerted, the devotion he inspired, he was every whit a king. Paris was his kingdom. He gave her his life. 'For thirty-seven years,' declared one of his eulogists, 'he worked without losing a day to increase the beautifulness and beauty of the city.' In return she became his obedient mistress. She promoted him until he held in his hand all the departments of public works. moted him until he held in his hand all the departments of public works. Streets, parks, squares and gardens were under his control. He decided where they should be made, how they should be decorated, when they should be cleaned. He looked after the lighting of the city. He controlled the sewers and the water works. He was the final authority on all matters of municipal architecture. He was the profinal authority on all matters of muni-cipal architecture. He was the pro-jector and executor of the numerous his-toric and artistic undertakings which add to the interest and beauty of Paris. Nearly 6000 men were in his service. His word was their law, and, most re-markable, it was a law honored and markable, it was a law honored and loved by all.

M. Alphaud rose to the position he occupied at his death by a rare combination of personal qualities and of circumstances. He had tact, trained ability, singleness of purpose. He had as a friend the one man who was able to start him on his career. He was allowed to keep his position because all the rest of the Parisian worl was embroiled by to keep his position because all the restof the Parisian worl was embroiled by exciting politics or by war, and was glad enough to find some ody who would take care of the city without mixing with the general turmoil.

Born at Grenoble, in Southeastern France, in 1817, he was educated at the Ecole Polytechnique and the Ecole des Ponts et Chaussers. When 22 years old he was sent to Bordeaux as engineer. Here he remained fifteen years. At this time the prefect of the depart-ment of the Gironde, in which Bordeaux ment of the Gironde, in which Bordeaux is situated, was the afterwards famous Baron Haussmann. This prefect was closely associated with the young engineer and learned to value highly his intelligence, his taste and his industry. But M. Haussmann did not remain in the Gironde. The second empire had begun. Napoleon III called him to take the prefecture of the Seine, confiding to him at the time his desire that Paris should be transformed. Together they worked out an ambitious plan. But where was the engineer who could But where was the engineer who could execute it? Baron Haussmann rememexecute it? Baron Haussmann remembered the young man at Bordeaux and in 1854 he called him to Paris as director of streets and parks.

The task which M. Alphaud was asked to undertake was to make the most magnificent city in the world from a town with all the faults of the middle ages, with cramped streets, and light. a town with all the faults of the middle ages, with cramped streets, sans light, sans air. To accomplish it he must tear down the city, relay and rebuild it, and all without seriously interrupting traffic. He put himself to the work with tremendous energy.

From 1854 to 1871, the end of the empire, he conducted the Bois de Boulogne and the Bois de Vincennes, those beautiful parks to the west and east of beautiful parks to the west and east of the city, into either of which all Paris can pour itself in a half an hour at a cost of 3 or 4 sous. Within the city limits he utilized waste lands to make the charming parks of Monceau, Mont-souris and Buttes-Chaumont, and he con-structed some of the finest of the great boulevards and avenues. The were not only splendid feats of engin-eering. They were works of art. Says one of M. Alphaud's admirers: "It re-quired a poet to conceive the Bois de Boulogne, the Bois de Vincennes, the parks of Monceau, Montsouris, Buttes-Chaumont. Alphaud was a poet of deeds. He handled not rhymes but trees, not syllables but flowers. His epics were great parks, his sonnets lit-tle squares."

In this period M. Alphaud established a fine system of nurseries and hothouses, from which the city is supplied with trees and the parks and squares are ornamented the year around with a profusion of flowers and shrubbery.

profusion of flowers and shrubbery.

In 1871 the empire fell. The republic succeeded. Great changes were made in the personnel of the city, but M. Alphaud remained. He had become an indispensable man. Several departments had been added to his original trust under the empire. Now he was made director of public works. By 1875 everything pertaining to aboveground Paris was in his hands. Three years later, on the death of the engineer years later, on the death of the engineer of water works and sewers, underground Paris was added.

Paris was added.

From the time He began to serve the republic until his death he continued the work which he began under the empire. The changes he planned and directed were prodigious. Wretched quarters have been completely wiped out. Closed courts, where beggars and miscreants swarmed, have been turned that one services. into open squares. Damp hollows have been filled in and made healthful build-ing sites. The health of the city has been so improved that the average length of a life has been increased three years. The reputation of being the best lighted city in the world has been earned. Its street cleaning service has been made so perfect that there is not an alley or passage which is not swept and washed at least once a day. The streets have been filled with conveniences and comforts.

All the changes made by M. Alphaud have been handled with a profound regard for historic associations. No monument has been removed unless

A Roman ruler found favor with the multitude by giving them bread and circuses and South American potentates "make themselves solid" by establish by the body of the procedure of the solid the soli tates "make themselves solid" by es-tablishing brass bands; so French gov-ernments have been in the habit of silencing criticism or winning friends by fêtes and expositions. Nobody is dearer in Paris than he who can amuse by a brilliant fête. M. Alphaud was the prince of the fête and exposition-makers.

The success of the expositions of 1867 and 1878 were largely credited to him. In both cases he not only made the shows themselves desightful, but he so arranged portions of the improvement which they required as to give the city permanent advantage. Thus in 1867 he transformed a steep piece of waste ground near the exposition into a series of fine terraces, and in 1878 he erected there a palace and laid out a garden, there a palace and laid out a garden, which have remained one of the most popular resorts of the city—the Trocadero.

His crowning piece of exposition-mak ing, as well as the crowning work of his life, was the exposition of 1889. M. Alphaud was 70 years old in 1877. The French law requires that its servants Alphaud was 70 years old fn 18,77. The French law requires that its servants retire at that age. The director went to the minister and announced his age, at the same time begging that he be allowed to remain in office. "I know," he said to the minister, "that if you conform to the rule you will compet me to retire; that is, you will kill. I am accustomed to work. Inactivity would be death to me. Besides I want to manage the exposition." The minister broke the rule and M. Alphaud made the exposition to the delight, not only of France, but of the world.

The Champ-de-Mars, which was chosen for the fair of 1889, was a barren and unsightly tract of land. There was opposition to the great fete being held there, but M. Alphaud conquered everybody by his faith in his plans, and, indeed, succeeded in inspiring everybody with his own enthusiasm. As in 1867 and 1878 he desired that permanent decorations and improvements should remain to the city. He succeeded so well that today the formerly unsightly space is known as the Champs Elysees of the Left Bank.

Everybody remembers the result of Everybody remembers the result of his work. The exposition was an extravaganza of brilliancy, of daring, of fancy. The audacity with which the buildings were garlanded with light, klosques and booths were constructed of colored glass, flowers and fountains and statues were strewn everywhere, and the skill with which, amidst all this profusion, harmony was preserved were the amazement of the world.

It was M. Alphaud who created all this, and he did it while attending to the mammoth organization of the public works, every department of which he put into condition for a brilliant parade during the exposition and prepared as well to discharge easily the large increase of work which the presence of so many visitors in the city for large increase of 'work which the presence of so many visitors in the city for so long a time made necessary.

This faculty for directing a great number of things at once characterized all his work. He knew just when and how the streets were being swept, and at the same time he was giving directions about the laying out of flowerbeds. He looked after the details of architecture and he ordered the conarchitecture, and he ordered the con-struction of sewers. Few men take such, a variety of work without incur-ring the contempt and dislike of their ring the contempt and dislike of their subordinates. M. Alphaud could do it because. of his superior knowledge, taste and experience. Architects, engineers, landscape gardeners listened to him because they recognized that he was thoroughly versed in their professions, and that his suggestions were remarkable for their taste and practical value.

His tact in handling men was rare. Not only those in his service yielded willingly to him. The municipal coun-cil itself submitted to M. Alphaud. cil itself submitted to M. Alphaud. Members declared that there was no way of denying a man who. even when matters looked compromising, would come before them with irresistible good humor, with incontestable figures, and with a knowledge of detail which seemed superhuman. They always ended by voting what he wanted.

His appearance no doubt contributed to his power. He was tall and broad-shouldered, with piercing eyes and a kindly face, almost benignant indeed of late years, because of his white beard.

The knowledge of the disinterestedness of his service made all who came ness of his service made all who came in contact with him more obedient to his wishes. No one believed that M. Alphaud encouraged 'jobs' or enriched himself from the public purse. It spite of the fact that in his service he had directed three great expositions with the enormous outlays they required and in spite of the fact that hundreds of millions of frances passed under his conmillions of francs passed under his control each year, he lived simply in a quiet villa on the outskirts of the city. No one ever-hinted that he made more money from his office than the $6000

Nor did he ever seek power other than that of his office. It is said that he might have entered the French parliament at any time and that he was proached more than once to enter the ministry. His invariable reply was: "I prefer to direct the works of the city of Paris."

city of Paris."

He had his honors, however. After the exposition of 1889 he was given the grand cross of the Legion of Honor—the only engineer to whom it was ever given. And after the death of Baron Haussmann he mas made a member of the Academy of Fine Arts. This latter honor he was very eager for, and in hopes of getting it he had written three works on subjects connected with his profession. The greatest public recognition he ever received was the magnificent funeral the city of Paris gave him.

His remains were laid in state under the dome which he had constructed in the Champ-de-Mars. Over him were hung the decorations used over the re-mains of Victor Hugo. The dais used mains of victor ringo. The dais used had been in service two days before the funeral of Dom Pedro, ex-Emperor of Brazil. Representatives of the President of the republic, of the government, of the academy and of numerous learned and scientific bodies, the municipal countries of the service cil and representatives of all depart-ments of the city's administration, be-sides hosts of influential persons from sides nosts of influential persons from all classes of society, were present. The floral tributes were magnificent. Military honors added to the eclat of the service. The cortege marched through the chief boulevards which M. Alphaud had constructed. All Paris turned out to do him honor.

Likewise artistic effect has been considered at every step. No one who has seen Paris can forget the way in which streets and boulevards have been arranged to afford fine approaches to the great public buildings and to give charming vistas of distant domes and towers.

But it has not been the rebuilding of Paris alone which has made Mr. Alphaded it.

And who will take M. Alphaud's place! Nobody, probably. He was an absolute monarch, and he was jealous to a childish degree of any interference with his power. Those who worked under him were expected to obey implicitly. He would not divide power or even attempt to fit men to work in the pendently in the departments. His kingdom falls to places without him, the has established no dynasty.

It is as well that he did not. One-man power does not exist without abuses. They crept into M. Alphaud's administration and the municipality loved him too well to attempt reform while he lived. The press and most thoughtful people believed that such concentration of power as existed in his case was a mistake, but were silent because it was M. Alphand.

OUR FAMOUS CAPTAINS.

The Great Books for Veteran Soldiers and American Citizens. There are thousands of comrades who fought during the war under the leadership of the four great generals, Grant, Sherman, Sheridan and McClellan, who would have purchased the memoirs of these historic captains when published had the price been placed at a reasonable figure. There is an opportunity now, however, as the Cosmopolitan Maga-zine of New York has purchased 600,-000 volumes of the memoirs in the original subscription editions, bound in green and gold cloth, and is almost giving them away in connection with yearly subscriptions to that popular magazine. They contain the personal history of the great commanders, and form an indispensable part of the his-tory of the country. No library, private or public, large or little, is complete without them.

By special contract THE TIMES is enabled to give its readers the benefit of this great offer, which is fully explained in our advertising pages Never has a book had such a sale in the United States as "Gen. Grant's Memoirs." Over 650,000 copies have already gone into the homes of the rich, but the subscription price of $7 has placed it beyond the reach of people in moderate circumstances. If 650,000 people have been willing to pay $7 for "Grant's Memoirs," there must be some thousands more in Callfornia who will want them at the low price for which they are now offered by us. The edition which we are offer-ing is the publishers' original edition, best paper, green and gold cloth binding, hitherto sold by subscription for $7. Our offer is an extraordinary one, when taken, as it is, in connection with the Cosmopolitan and The Times, either daily or weekly.

LAWN TENNIS.

Preparations for the Coming Tourns at Pasadena—At Riverside.

All the latent interest in lawn tennis being aroused by the coming tournament in Pasadena—a . small tourna-ment limited to three entries from each club invited to take part-on the 22d inst., being Washington's birthday and a public holiday. Very pretty gold medals are being prepared for the winners. Immediately on the conclusion of that event about all the enthusiasts will pack their rackets and flannels and start for Riverside, where the midwinter tournament of the Southern Califor nia Association begins Wednesday, the 24th, lasting three days on the beauti-tiful six-court grounds of the Casa Blanca Club.

The order of events is as follows One, gentlemen's association singles; two, ladie's association singles; three, gentlemen's association doubles; four, mixed association doubles: five, gentle men's (open) handicap singles; entries to be made to the secretary before Sat-urday, February 20. Any of these entries may be sent to the following, who have the tournament in charge who will forward them to the secretary; A. H. Halsted, Robert Beltner, River-side; E. B. Tufts, Los Angeles; R. H. Lindsey, Pasadena.

NOTES.

Bumiller is playing in splendid form, and will make a hard fight. One of the players from Pasadena yesterday remarked "I suppose that Little Bumiller! will walk away with everything."

The ladies of Riverside will provide luncheon each day at the club grounds. They will also give a ball to the visiting players on Friday night.

The entries from Los Angeles will probably include Cosby, Germain, Bumiller, Manning, Coulter and Miss Tufts. Cosby and Germain will again battle for the right to hold the championship in doubles which they won so brilliantly at Santa Monica.

IN CHINATOWN.

Making New Year Calls on Celestial Friends.

A Little Late in Celebrating, But The Whoop It Up-Social Obligations and Dramatic Information.

The Chinese quarter is littered from one end to the other with fragments of exploded firecrackers and bombs bright colored paper and shucks of various kinds which even the deep and churning mud of the narrow streets does not completely engulf, so ample is the supply. Since January 29 the whole Chinese population has been en-gaged in one engrossing occupation, the proper celebration of the coming of the glad new year. The children of Con-fucius were a few hundred years ahead of we Christians in the discovery of gunof we Christians in the discovery of gun-powder, but they lag twenty-nine days behind us in discovering that one year has worn out and must be replaced by another. They make up for their tardi-ness in this respect by keeping up the festival for a week or so, whooping it up meantime in a most enthusiastic manner which challenges the admira-tion of the busy Americans who be-grudge a single holiday of idleness. A tenderfoot from the East accom-panied a Times man on a turn through panied a Times man on a turn through this classic section of the city to make the expected New Year's call. As he never lets business matters interfere with his social obligations he made the complete rounds from the new Joss tem-ple clear down to the horse stable of Gee friends and their friends said to them:

"Quong he fah choy."
This is the nearest that some of them could come to saying "A Happy New Year," and it had to go. That phrase really means a great deal to the Chinese people, who are usually more sincere in their well-wishing than some of us are,
who say those soft and soothing things more from force of habit than from any who say those soft and soothing things more from force of habit than from any philanthropic motive. Everywhere they went they were met with coddial hospitality and the aroma of burning stink sticks. Business men kept open house, receiving their friends and the cash deposits of debtors, refreshments and receipts in full being provided for those who wanted them provided for those who wanted them. It is a very nice custom they have of settling up all debts during this new year's time so that a new set of books can be opened up. A Chinaman who beats his grocer out of a bill is not a hero among his people.

Tea and cigars, candies and fruit were offered and usually accepted by the American visitors, but for the Chinese callers the refreshment list included other delicacles which the vitilated taste of the former could not vitiated taste of the former could not they saw one of the 965 acts of a charm they saw one of the 965 acts of a charming comedietta which might be called "The Emperor's Predilections for Chopped-up People, or the Canary Bird Maiden of Ooloug." For persons who have worked in boiler factories so long that the taste for noise is insatiable, having grown on them like the oplum hablt, the Chinese theater possesses a great attraction. The orchestra is not large but it is industrious, and as the musibut it is industrious, and as the musi-cians enter into the spirit of the play the drum and cymbals so drown out the queaking of the devil's fiddle and the tumming of the snakeskin guitar as to threaten a terrific inundation.

Some of the actors in this play render their parts in a delicious manner that evokes great applause from the orchestra. Two or three of them speak Chinese with a foreign accent which makes their words more or less unintelligible to the casual visitor, but the way they dance around in their delirium tremens clothes and pretend to cut each other to pieces defies competition. It was the intention of the newspaper man to write an elaborate critique of the play, but just at the time when Prince Yang-tse-Kiang discovered the strawberry mark on his grandfather's vest and cries out: "'Tis he! 'tis he! me long-lost grandsire, for whom I have searched the world since he was stolen from his mother's arms——" the Eastern visitor said: "Let's go home." And then they came away.

abroad by hundreds and thousands of copies! They are the most interesting and effective missionary agents that can be sent out, by reason, particularly, of the ten years' showing and contrast presented in their columns.
